Mr. Raskob Resigns.
American Business Grows.
Labor Says 50-50.
Approaching the Fight.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1928.)

MR. RASKOB resigns as financial head of General Motors. His present job is to elect Gov. Smith in the face of prosperity and a Republican plurality of seven millions. That is job enough for anyone.

IN addition, Mr. Raskob believes in concentration, the one thing at a time method. And finally, General Motors, with its stock value of four billion dollars, does not want to be in politics, directly or indirectly.

The National Democratic chairman is, for the time, not an automobile man.

IF you know HOW, you can do business anywhere. Sears, Roebuck, under its new president, Gen. Wood, plans stores all over this country and in foreign countries, with constant expansion.

The Woolworth stores, growing amazingly, now have 18 stores in Germany, called 25 and 50 pfennig stores, the equivalent of 5 and 10 cents.

AMERICAN business understands its business. And when it deals in foreign countries it buys its goods in the foreign countries, thus keeping everybody happy while making profits.

ON Saturday the executive committee of the American Federation of Labor will meet at Atlantic City and decide probably not to take sides in the national campaign.

Both national candidates are all right, says labor.

THAT is sensible. Labor, race and religion should be kept out of politics. Besides, organized labor cannot deliver its men, and does not help itself by a declaration with no result. Mr. Green, head of the Federation, is a wise American.

YOU are now approaching the Tunney-Heeney fight, and a national cessation of other interests.

Many parties will leave Newport on yachts, traveling to the fight and back comfortably, and hundreds will get in line and gladly sit up all night, hoping to get one of the better cheap seats, of which there is none.

WHEN our ancestors of 500,000 years ago fought with fists and clubs, not for $1,000,000, but for some dead animal or live woman, they could not imagine that descendants owning wireless, radio, airplanes and libraries would continue to find their deepest interest in a fist fight.

Some descendants change little in 500,000 years.

SIR OLIVER LODGE begged, Sir Arthur Conan-Doyle pleaded, but the stern London judge charged costs against a distinguished London medium, accused of telling fortunes for three disguised policemen.

The medium, Mrs. Cantlon, said she worked with the assistance of an Indian chief, dead 400 years.

For the scoffer it is hard to imagine a chief of that vintage knowing anything about a London policeman's fortune. But Lodge and Conan-Doyle, with many other intelligent, well-educated Britishers, believe in spiritualism. Men believe what they want to believe, evidence makes no difference.

MRS. MYRTLE HUDDLESTON, weight 240 pounds, is on a hospital cot, throwing her arms about, delirious, thinking that she is still swimming. She beat records by swimming in a pool continuously for 54 hours 32 minutes.

Men paid to see her, and some were annoyed when her manager forced her to stop, because she was turning blue and her flesh was cracking in various places.

Man is the only animal that enjoys seeing his own kind suffer. Cats torture mice, but don't torture cats.

MR. WORK leaves the Interior Department and President Coolidge praises the high state of efficiency to which the department has been raised under Secretary Work.

That is putting it mildly. Secretary Work is exactly what his name suggests—ALL WORK—intelligent, tireless, never satisfied with what has been done.

Mr. Hoover is fortunate to have such a man working for him.

STREET gang killings continue to worry New York. Yesterday, before the sun rose, a police sergeant at his Brooklyn desk heard two shots. His men found a sawed-off shotgun, tossed away by five men in a motor.

They also found Anthony Iannello, with his head blown off by two charges of shot fired from behind.

Witnesses are afraid to talk, dead men can't talk, the killers won't talk. It's a new kind of crime, with the drug and bootleg trades and jealousies back of it.

MYSTERY GIRL DROWNS

Meets "Drowned" Sister at Morgue

The body of an unknown girl, drowned in Allegheny River, today took two sisters to the morgue, the one seeking to identify it as that of the other and the sister seeking to identify it as that of a cousin. Emotions bubbled over and there were tears—tears of happiness. Anna Stefanik, Brownsville Hospital nurse, was summoned to view the body as that of her sister, Elsie, 19 (left), 847 Phinea street.

NAMELESS IN RIVER CAMP

Do You Know This Woman?

AGE—About 25 years.
HEIGHT—5 feet 6 inches.
WEIGHT—135 pounds.
HAIR—Brown, bobbed.
COMPLEXION—Brunette.
CLOTHING—Green bathing suit, black pumps, black felt hat, flesh colored stockings, pearl beads.

She is believed by morgue attaches to be of Italian, Polish or Hungarian extraction.

At the morgue today is the body of a young woman about 25 years of age, who morgue attaches have vainly sought to have identified. The body, clad in a green bathing suit, was found floating in the Allegheny River, near the National Amusement Park, Freeport road, near Blawnox, last night.

All through this morning and afternoon scores of women, men and young girls visited the morgue in an attempt to identify the body or at least furnish some clue which might lead to this. Their efforts, however proved futile.

About all that appears to be known of her comes from persons living at and in the vicinity of Camp Sunup, near where the body was found. These told coroner's deputies the girl was unknown to them but that she had been living for a time at the camp. At the camp, now almost deserted, deputies found the girl's clothing and

P.R.R. Boom Here

By GEORGE M. SNYDER.

Pittsburgh is the focal point of a gigantic Pennsylvania Railroad improvement program which will involve the expenditure of $45,000,000. The plan will include the reconstruction of both freight and passenger terminal facilities and the building of the finest produce terminal in the world, according to E. T. Whiter, vice president of the road, who has been placed in direct charge of the development here.

In addition to the building of improvements within the city, $20,000,000 will be spent on changes in the lines west of Pittsburgh. This follows construction work on lines leading into the city from the East recently completed at a cost of $15,000,000.

TWO PITTSBURGHERS

Of great importance in bringing about the expenditures of these large sums here have been two Pittsburgh directors on the Pennsylvania Railroad board. R. B. Mellon, president of the Mellon National Bank, and Howard Heinz, president of the H. J. Heinz Company, have a thorough appreciation of the Pittsburgh situation. They feel that the Pennsylvania should be among the leading factors in providing in advance for Pittsburgh's development. They have gone to the front with Pittsburgh's story and they have been responsible for the road's policy as regards the city, "Be not content to await demand, lead off and help create demand."

Officials of the road have been making an intensive study of this territory and have decided that the city's growth calls for new facilities. The survey of the steel industry has shown that the city will undoubtedly retain its prestige as the leading steel-making center of the world. The consumption of Pitts-

DEMPSEY IN HEENEY'S CORNER AS SECOND

NEW YORK, July 25.—(INS.)—Jack Dempsey today agreed to act as a second to Tom Heeney, heavyweight contender, in his fight with Champion Gene Tunney tomorrow night, providing the Boxing Commission will grant him a special second's license, it was announced by Heeney's backers.

Dempsey was sitting in Madison Square Garden, chatting with the two Mortimer brothers, John and Bernard, and Charlie Harvey, all Heeney backers, when the suggestion was made that he "go in behind Tom."

Dempsey readily agreed, and said that he would go before the commission tomorrow to seek a special license. Heeney's camp was greatly elated, believing that the presence of the ex-champion in Tom's corner would prove a great psychological advantage.

Dempsey appeared to relish the idea of being in the opposite corner from Gene, even if only as a second.

NEW YORK, July 25.—On the eve of what looms as one of the flattest heavyweight bouts in the history of the fight game, Tex Rickard, fight promoter, today announced a reduction in the price of the 7,000 $5 seats to $3 in an effort to interest fans in the Gene Tunney-Tom Heeney battle for the championship in the Yankee Stadium tomorrow night.

TEX RICKARD.

The demand for tickets to the big fight has not been what Rickard anticipated and indications are that the battle tomorrow night will find plenty of vacant seats in the spacious Yankee Stadium.

Rickard's announcement that the cheaper seats would be reduced, marks the first time he has taken this procedure in an effort to stir up interest in one of his fight promotions.

The $3 seats are to be placed on sale at the Stadium at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

RAIL CRASH PROBED

Wreck of the Pennsylvania Railroad picnic train eastbound from Canton, O., and subsequent injury to 30 or more men, women and children was unavoidable, according to the explanation of railroad officials today.

Five coaches of the picnic special sideswiped two derailed freight cars in the North Side yards and but for the presence of mind of the picnic train's engineer, C. B. Johnston, 1501 Allegheny avenue, the crash might have been a tragedy.

Johnston saw the freight cars hanging over the track and jammed his brakes, bringing the train almost to a stop before the crash.

Eleven coaches, carrying 1,150 persons, made up the picnic train, the third section of 12 cars returning from a Pennsylvania Railroad picnic at Canton. All the cars were filled with picnickers in gay spirits after a day's outing. Five of the coaches scraped the side of the protruding freight cars, the occupants being showered with broken glass and debris.

Twenty-two persons were treated at the St. John's and Allegheny

PARIS, July 25.—(AP.)—Announcement of the reinstatement of Bill Tilden as a member of the Davis Cup team and announcement that he will play in the challenge round against France was made today at the headquarters of the American team, following the return of President Samuel H. Collom, of the U. S. L. T. A., from London.

Pittsburgh Called Ideal Plane Center

Pittsburgh is an ideal location for the airplane industry, B. F. Mahoney, of San Diego, Cal., builder of Lindbergh's overseas plane, declared here today. Mahoney is in the city for a few days on a coast-to-coast flight.

Other cities are bidding for the airplane industry, he pointed out, but in his opinion Pittsburgh should receive first consideration because of its facilities.

"STRIP" VOTERS LIKE SMITH

"The Strip" waited four weeks for its chance to express itself on the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph vote machines regarding its preference as between Hoover and Smith.

And how expressive that expression was!

Three hundred and seven votes for Smith and 24 for Hoover!

Looks like the Second Ward had gone Democratic.

Yesterday's voting on the six mechanical ballots showed a three-to-one favor of Smith.

West View Park, where a machine was installed, returned a 3-to-2 vote for the Democrat. Today the Business Men's Association of the East North Side is holding its fourteenth annual picnic at West View Park and a heavy vote is expected. Later in the week the Odd Fellows of Western Pennsylvania are holding their annual picnic at the park for the orphans' benefit.

The City-County Building, where politics is a vocation, continued to show enthusiasm in the machine vote.

On its second week at Kennywood Park the machine ballot there is demonstrating interesting things. Yesterday the Greek Catholic churches had a picnic. Today the Oakmont and Verona citizens will gather there and Thursday the Pennsylvania Railroad Mutual Benefit Association will bring thousands about the park, with a large vote looked for on the machine.

The grand totals now run well over 37,000, with nearly 22,000 recorded for Smith.

Results recorded by the machines yesterday follow:

Hill Slated Against Giants

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.
Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, July 25.—Determined to get revenge for the 6-3 setback handed them yesterday in the series opener by the Giants, the Pirates prepared today to battle the McGrawmen behind the hurling efforts of Carmen Hill, the Corry Giant.

Hill has had three full days' rest since he last toiled for the Buccos, and if he is in the same shape as he was last Saturday, when he beat the Brooklyn Dodgers out at Forbes Field, he will make the going extremely strenuous for the Giants this afternoon.

McGraw has Joe Genewich primed for work against the Corsairs. A victory for the Pirates today and a defeat for the Robins will put the Pittsburgh aggregation in fifth place at the head of the second division.

Killed in Duel Over Woman

An early morning street duel was followed by death in Passavant Hospital today of an unidentified Negro, 33, who was shot through the heart. Police are holding William Stewart, 30, Negro, of 1216 Wylie avenue, who is alleged to have fired the fatal shot.

The shooting occurred in front of 43 Logan street. A quarrel in a house in that neighborhood was renewed on the street after the two men were ejected at 5:30 o'clock. According to a police report, the dead man drew a knife and lunged at Stewart. The latter whipped out a revolver and sent a bullet through the unidentified man's heart. Police were told that the two men quarreled over a woman in the house where the fight started.

HURRAH!

Passengers on the Pittsburgh Betsy Ann at the beginning of the race felt sure of winning and waved goodby to the Chris Greene.

CHRIS GREENE'S EVEN!

Then the Cincinnati steamer, on the inside of a sharp bend in the river, came alongside and gradually gained on the doughty Betsy Ann. Here it is alongside and churning mightily.

Soon the rival craft pulled away from the Betsy until a full boat-length separated the two.

CHRIS GREENE WINS; TITLE CHALLENGED

Cordill Hull, Pittsburgh Packet, Posts Wager to Defeat New Champion.

Betsy Ann, Long Queen of Western Rivers, Loses Race and Gilded Antlers.

International News Service.

CINCINNATI, O., July 25.—The river packet Chris Greene will not be allowed to rest on the laurels it won here last night in a colorful victory over the Betsy Ann in a fighting 20-mile race up the Ohio River from here to New Richmond, O.

The victor in the colorful revival of the time-honored sport of river boat racing has been challenged to defend its claims to the river championship by Capt. M. O. Irwin, of the steamer Senator Cordill, Pittsburgh. The crew of the Senator Cordill is expected to post $500 to match the amount offered on deposit by Capt. Irwin for a wager.

One new touch to the time-honored old sport was added when droning airplanes circled above the puffing boats as they left the starting point. It was a gala day in river boat annals, all hands from roustabouts to captains being dressed for the occasion.

By JOHN P. COWAN, Staff Correspondent.

NEW RICHMOND, O., July 25.—No longer is the Betsy Ann speed queen of Ohio River packets. Somewhere between here and Pittsburgh she is making her way, but shorn of her gilded antlers which for years she carried on her bow as a token of her prowress in outrunning all other boats on the western rivers.

Sadly those horns of gilt were removed from the Betsy Ann and presented to the Chris Greene, a new boat and her rival in these waters. This melancholy act occurred at sunset last night on the New Richmond wharf, after one of the most thrilling steamboat races ever witnessed on this historic stream. In the run of some 20 miles from Cincinnati the Chris Greene reached here in two hours and 15 minutes, and less than two minutes later the defeated and old, but no less sprightly, Betsy Ann crossed the line.

GOOD LOSER

Capt. Charles Ellsworth, master of the Betsy Ann and her pilot in the race, leaned from the pilot house and waved his congratulations to Capt. Chris Greene, master and owner of the winning craft.

"You put up a wonderful race," shouted back Capt. Chris, "and we are proud to win from such a boat."

In a few moments both boats touched the wharf, while the Ohio and Kentucky hills re-echoed the din of whistles, sirens, automobile horns and the ringing of bells. When the noise had subsided somewhat, the New Richmond Silver Cornet Band marched down from the public square and struck up Sousa's stirring "Hands Across the Sea."

Frederick Way, Jr., of Sewickley, Pa., president and general manager of the Pittsburgh and Cincinnati Packet Line, took the gilded antlers and walking across the gangway to the rival boat, presented the token to Capt. Greene, expressing the congratulations and good wishes of the Betsy Ann to the Chris Greene. Overcome by emotion, Capt. Greene could only stammer his thanks.

Across the valley rang the notes of "The Star-Spangled Banner," as the band closed its concert and the gilded antlers were fastened to the Chris Greene's bow. Lights blinked here and there in the twilight, the boats rang their bells and in the gathering dusk moved up the river.

OLD-TIMERS DEPRESSED

Crowds on shore dispersed and as old men with their canes tottered home they muttered, "Well, I never thought I'd live to see the Betsy outdone," and the barefoot boys who scampered up the levee boasted, "Aw, the Betsy is still a fine boat and she will win next time as sure as shootin'."

Nation-wide interest in the race is regarded among rivermen as signalizing a revival of activities in the navigation of the inland waters. The steamboat trade is coming back, they say, and predict that the rivers will be reclaimed for commerce, just as the highways have been restored to their old-time glory by the advent of the motor car. It is estimated that more than 100,000 persons witnessed the contest, the banks on both sides of the stream being lined with spectators from Cincinnati to New Richmond.

Both boats stood out into the river at Central Bridge, between Cincinnati and Newport, Ky., at 6 p. m., Pittsburgh time, and the race was on without preliminaries. At first the Betsy Ann seemed to have the best of it and gained nearly half a boat length on her adversary. This advantage she held for more than six miles when at a sharp bend in the river the Chris Greene, turning on the shorter radius, slipped by and gained two boat lengths. The Betsy shortened this gain, but after about 12 miles lost it and when the goal was reached at the New Richmond wharf the Greene was about 1,000 feet in the lead.

Two of the cars became derailed in some unknown manner and almost immediately the picnic train was bearing down on the protruding cars on track No. 4.

If Johnston, the engineer, had failed to see the wreck and slow down, railroad officials say, some of the picnic cars might have been overturned in the crash.

Smith Set To Start Speech

By RAYMOND L. BORST, International News Service.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 25.—With his notification ceremony set for August 22, Gov. Al Smith today was preparing to put state affairs in such shape that for the next week or 10 days he can devote himself almost exclusively to the preparation of the address he will deliver in formally accepting the Democratic presidential nomination.

The Governor already has made his position clear to the country on what are expected to be two of the chief issues of the coming campaign—prohibition and farm relief. The day after he was nominated he sent a telegram to the Houston convention declaring, in substance, that he felt that the Volstead law should be modified. Subsequently he wired the head of the Indiana Farm Bureau that in the event of his election he would immediately call a conference to work out a concrete plan for farm relief for submission to Congress at its opening session.

TO MEET RITCHIE

Smith announced today that he would leave Albany Friday for New York City where he will confer that night with Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, of Maryland.

It is understood the two executives will discuss the political situation in Maryland and some of the other border states.

The conference with Gov. Ritchie is regarded as the most important one that Gov. Smith will have with any of the Democratic leaders before the notification.

GANG SLAYERS KILL 25TH HERE

The deadly guns of a vengeful vendetta claimed their twenty-fifth victim in 1928 in Pittsburgh, when Nicasio Landolina, 74, was shot to death last night as he stood on the front porch of his home, 203 Mayflower street, East End.

The gangster toll in 1927 was 28 persons killed in the bootleg and white slave warfare that in most cases has baffled police. Few of the murderers have been caught. With five months yet to go, 1928 bids fair to far outstrip the preceding year in the number of victims "taken for a ride" by gang killers.

SHOOT FROM AUTO

The slayers of Landolina drove up to his home, shoved shotguns through the curtains of the car and fired at the aged man, the shots striking him in the side. The murder car sped away and neighbors rushed to aid the victim. He was taken to the Pittsburgh Hospital where he was pronounced dead.

Two boys today described the murder car. Jay Adair, 16, and Lee Morgan, 20, Negroes, of 309 Paulson avenue, who were in another car nearby, said the auto which drove slowly past the Landolina home with a message of death, was a large green touring car of Flint make. "But we were too excited to get the license number," young Adair explained.

WIFE SEES MURDER

Landolina, a retired fruit merchant, had just finished watering flowers in the front of his home and was standing near his wife on the porch when the gunmen's car drove up. After firing the fatal shots the slayers sped into Lowell street, to Carver street and out Frankstown road. They were pursued by police to Oakmont, but there succeeded in escaping in a maze of other cars.

That Landolina had been threatened was evident, members of the homicide squad say, since he carried a .38 caliber revolver. It was found on him at the hospital. The wooden handle of the pistol was splintered.

Landolina's wife witnessed his murder. She and five sons survive. The sons are: Cosimo, 38; Dominick, 36; Joseph, 34; James, 29, and Nicholas, 25, and a daughter, Mrs. Carmella Cancenitta.

burgh steel both here and abroad is growing.

Vice President Whiter says his company would not be surprised at a truly remarkable gain in the export of steel and other products from Pittsburgh.

SPURRING SERVICE

The development of facilities here has two distinct phases. One is the handling of the large volume of traffic through the city. The other is in making provision for the tonnage originating and terminating here. The separating of these two types of traffic is greatly accelerating service.

The work of remodeling the freight and passenger terminals will make changes in an area of 30 blocks. East of Eleventh street, between the Allegheny River and Pike street, which is to be widened to 60 feet, existing railroad facilities are to be rearranged and extended and new structures built, doubling the capacity of those now in use. Extending from Eleventh street eastward, between Spring way and the present main line tracks, an area will be taken in for passenger terminal facilities.

Of the estimated cost of $45,000,000, the Pennsylvania has already spent $12,000,000 for three pieces of property. The road has authorized $5,000,000 for immediate construction.

Vice President Whiter is giving his immediate attention to the building of the first section of the new produce yard west of the Sixteenth street bridge. When this is completed a produce building in the older part of the yard, second to none in the world, will be built. It will be 100 feet wide will run four blocks along Pike street. It will be one of the longest buildings in Pittsburgh.

A new and modern freight house and yards will be constructed at the western end of the tract fronting on Eleventh street. Mr. Whiter hopes to have the produce and freight terminals so well advanced within the next few months that attention can be devoted to the new passenger terminal facilities, plans for which are well advanced.

OTHER IMPROVEMENTS

The lines for several miles along the north bank of the Allegheny River and the south bank of the Monongahela River has been improved by the expenditure of $15,000,000 in the past five years for track elevation, bridge construction, yard enlargement and engine house facilities.

These lines carry hundreds of thousands of cars annually to the north and south of the main terminal, avoiding the congested districts. They do not come into the four-track eastward main line until well along toward the west slope of the mountains. The effect has been equivalent to the building of two entirely new railroads through Pittsburgh.

From the North Side to Rochester, a distance of 25 miles, there is to be a six-track railroad relocated in many places at a cost of $20,000,000.

The first section of this work is under way between Shields and Glen Osborne, where tracks are being laid on a mammoth fill skirting the river. This section will be completed within a year and will permit work to be started on the section between Rochester and Conway.

PITTSBURGHER ELECTED DRAYMEN'S PRESIDENT

MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 25.—James Simpson, of Pittsburgh, was re-elected president of the National Team and Motor Truck Owners' Association here yesterday. George O'Brehoitze, Philadelphia, was chosen vice president, and John Harvey, Pittsburgh, secretary.

HuntKinin Hammer Murder

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., July 25.—(AP.)—A blood-stained automobile, containing a woman's hat, and a description of the couple were the only clues local authorities had today in their search for Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Booth, of Steubenville, O., wanted in connection with the death of Mrs. Booth's 78-year-old grandfather, G. W. Simmons, whose body, beaten with a hammer, was found near a highway at Lake City early yesterday.

Sheriff W. B. Douglas, piecing together fragments of stories brought in by his deputies, surmised that Simmons' skull was crushed with a hammer during a struggle in a moving automobile on the outskirts of Lake City, and his body thrown into a clump of bushes by the roadside where it was found.

A new sedan which police said answered the description of the car driven by the Booths when they visited Simmons in a Lake City tourist camp Monday night, was found on the streets here yesterday morning. Detectives have maintained a constant watch over the machine, but no one has claimed it.

Witnesses said they saw a man and woman leave the car early yesterday, stand on a street corner for a few minutes and then enter a restaurant.

WANTED TO FLEE

Police said several persons reported they overheard a conversation between the couple during which the woman pleaded with her companion to leave the city, but he declined, saying they were penniless and did not have sufficient money to buy gasoline.

"Well, we will ride until the gasoline gives out and then take to walking," the woman was quoted.

Police also received a report from an operator of a filling station near Lake City that as an automobile passed along the highway he heard cries of a man calling for police and screaming, "murder."

A coroner's jury viewed the body of Simmons at Lake City late yesterday and adjourned to meet again tomorrow.

RETIRED CONTRACTOR

STEUBENVILLE, O., July 25.—G. W. Simmons, 80, a retired contractor and reputed to be wealthy, resided with his son, Robert C. Simmons, a salesman of Maryland avenue, Steubenville, but since his retirement had been spending much of his time in Florida. His sons and two daughters live in the Steubenville district.

Members of the family stated that Mrs. E. L. Booth is a favorite granddaughter of the dead man and was spending her honeymoon in Florida, the couple and the aged man having made the journey in Simmons' automobile. Mrs. Booth is aged 18 and is a daughter of another son, Edward Simmons, of St. Clairsville, O. The girl was reared by her grandfather and accompanied him on all his trips to the South. She married Booth last March and it is said by relatives that Booth was out of work and hoped to obtain employment in Florida. Members of the family here have received no word from the Booths and said they knew nothing of Simmons' death. It was declared that recently he had sold his property and converted it into cash which was believed to be deposited in local banks.

Daughters of Simmons are Mrs. M. M. Newburn and Mrs. I. D. Bucey, both well known in Steubenville.

STEWART NIPS OUSTER MOVE OF JOHN D., JR.

NEW YORK, July 25.—(AP.)—The New York World today says that Col. Robert W. Stewart, chairman of the board of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, has checkmated the efforts of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., to force him from the leadership of the $500,000,000 corporation.

According to unimpeachable informants, says the World, Col. Stewart has corralled 51 per cent of the stock of the corporation which he now controls by ownership or proxy.

Demands that Col. Stewart resign his post were made by Mr. Rockefeller after Stewart refused to testify before the Senate Teapot Dome investigating committee.

The World says Wall Street is talking of a possible tightening of the alliance between Harry F. Sinclair, head of the Sinclair Consolidated Oil Company, and Col. Stewart, the operations of the two companies already having been combined in the purchase of crude oil and the transportation of oil by pipe line. Their possible operation as a unit would create the largest single group in the oil refining and marketing industry in the world.

FIND BODY IN RIVER

personal effects. These gave no clue to who she might be.

SISTER'S NAME ANNA

The most promising clue which it was thought might lead to identification came from persons living near the camp who had talked with her. They recalled she had said that she had a sister by the name of Anna, who was a nurse at the Brownsville Hospital. Last night a telephone call to the hospital revealed the fact that Anna Stefanik said she had a sister, Elsie Stefanik, living at 847 Phineas street, North Side, from whom she had not heard for some time.

This morning Elsie was located at a downtown store where she is employed. She said she had a cousin living in Pittsburgh and went to the morgue in an attempt to identify the body there. This she was unable to do.

In the meantime, Anna, fearing the drowned woman might be Elsie, left Brownsville this morning.

FEARS NOT REALIZED

Arriving at the morgue, an affecting scene took place between the two. Under a great strain all the way in from Brownsville and fearing what she might find at the morgue, the sight of her sister, alive and well, was too much for the girl. She threw her arms about the other girl, and the two sought relief in tears which were later succeeded by smiles. But the nurse was unable to identify the body of the woman on the slab.

In the meantime, a cousin of the Stefanik girls, Rose Stefanik, employed at 3605 Shadeland street, made an attempt to identify the dead woman, but said she never had seen her.

PHILADELPHIA BROKERS BUY WASHINGTON BONDS

WASHINGTON, Pa., July 25.—Washington County road improvement bonds in the sum of $175,000 were sold by the commissioners yesterday to Snyder & Co., of Philadelphia, who bid par, accrued interest and a premium of $4,165. The bonds which bear 4¼ per cent interest all mature by 1958, the first series maturing in 15 years.

2 Rescued As Tank Lets Go

Two men were overcome by ammonia fumes, leaking from a huge tank in Duquesne Garden, Craig street, shortly before noon today and were rescued by firemen. Residents of the vicinity were driven from their homes by the strong odor.

Frank Stanley, 40, engineer of the gardens, and William Flowers, 35, janitor, were carried from the building by members of Engine Company No. 14. The firemen, aided by employes of the United States Bureau of Mines, donned gas masks and entered the building to stop the leak.

2 BOYS KILLED BY TRAIN

NEW CASTLE, Pa., July 25.—The crushed bodies of two boys, believed to be George Buchko, 16, of 3729 Ninety-first street, Cleveland, and Joseph Dugigh, 18, of Chagrin Falls, O., were found on the tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad near Nashau, 13 miles north of New Castle, today.

It is believed that the victims were walking on the railroad and were struck by a train during the night.

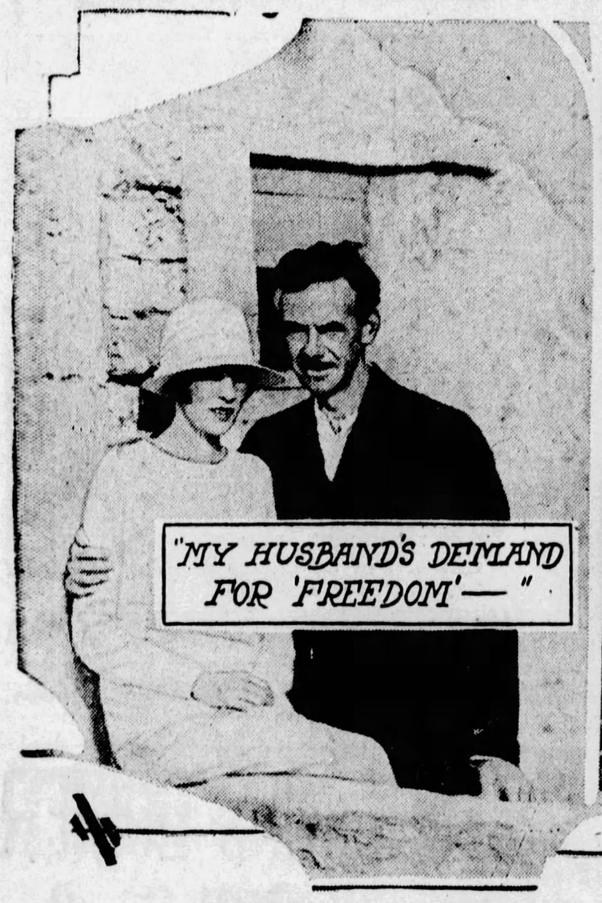
OFFER HEARTS TO MISS STONE

Artists -:- Mrs. O'Neill Resigned to Divorce -:- Disagree



O'NEILLS

"—has forced me," finishes Mrs. Eugene O'Neill, "to open for him the gate to captivity." Divorce action goes ahead and now she resigns herself to the surrender of the "artistic freedom" which he insists is so essential to art.

DISAGREE

And now that the story has so widely circulated, others are disagreeing for Mr. O'Neill, whose successful plays are many. Here, J. Allen St. John, Chicago artist, says his wife (also above) inspires him in his pursuit of the artistic.

HELP

And take the case of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar S. Cameron, both of whom are artists. They say that each is an inspiration to the other and that, after all, it is the love that makes the marriage a success that the O'Neill's union has not been.

Held for Dynamite Murder

ROCKFORD, Ill., July 25.—(AP.)—Under a charge of first degree murder and without bond, Paul Reed, 24, a draguhtsman, was bound over to the October county grand jury yesterday when given a preliminary hearing in police court for the slaying of Vernon Plager, radio expert blown up in his automobile last week.

Just previous to his arraignment Reed had confessed stealing the dynamite that was found in his former rooming house, but maintained he did not use it for bombing Plager's automobile, insisting he had taken it to blast out a spring at a lake in southern Wisconsin, where he intended to go on a fishing trip.

Reed was linked with the slaying as a result of an affair he had had with Mrs. Iva Plager, widow of the radio man, who aso was taken into custody as a suspect. She was later released.

GENERAL MOTORS POLICY INSURES 200,000 TOILERS

NEW YORK, July 25.—(AP.)—More than 200,000 employes of the General Motors Corporation were made participants yesterday in what was described as the largest group insurance policy ever issued. The policy, for nearly $400,000,000, was issued by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company and covers death, sickness and accident. The plan is co-operative, but the General Motors assumes a substantial part of the premium.

LAW NOT IN UNIFORM, MOTORIST FREED

An autoist accused of a minor automobile law violation was discharged at a hearing before Burgess Walter Berner, of Sharpsburg, during a hearing in which the arresting officer, Motorcycle Patrolman Chester Zygello, was accused of gross violations of motor law provisions by Attorney Frank Zappala, counsel of the Pittsburgh Motor Club.

The case was one brought to the attention of the Motor Club as a result of its drive against law enforcement officers who persecute motorists rather than impartially enforce laws.

Patrolman Zygello, according to testimony introduced at the hearing, arrested Arthur H. Sykes, of Saybrook apartments, Craft avenue, the defendant in the case, while off duty and not in uniform. Sykes, Zygello charged, had passed a traffic beacon with the signal against him.

In addition to Zygello's making the arrest while not in uniform, Sykes charged that Zygello forced him to trail him until Zygello had taken a woman friend home before taking Sykes to the Sharpsburg municipal building. There, Sykes charges, he was not given an opportunity to sign a promise to appear for a hearing as required by law, but was forced to give Officer Zygello a $15 forfeit.

Last night when Sykes appeared for a hearing before Burgess Berner, he alleged that no information had been sworn out against him and that Zygello, until that time, had not turned the forfeit money over to the burgess.

In addition to violating the automobile law by making an arrest while not in uniform; by not giving the arrested party an opportunity to sign a promise to appear for hearing; by accepting a forfeit and not swearing to an information embodying the alleged offense before the time set for the hearing, Zygello used general high-handed methods, Attorney Zappala charged.

Burgess Berner said he discharged Sykes because the arrest was made by Zygello while the latter was not in uniform as required by law.

Claim Pa. Vote for Smith

International News Service.

NEW YORK, July 25.—Brighter prospects for a Democratic national victory in Pennsylvania than have existed for a quarter of a century exist at present in the Keystone State, Democratic leaders told national campaign managers here today.

The Pennsylvania Democratic delegation consisted of Joseph S. Guffy of Pittsburgh, Sedgwick Kistler, national committeeman, and John R. Collins, state chairman.

"We can carry Pennsylvania for Smith and Robinson," Kistler said. "We have even a good chance in Philadelphia. Al Smith is the only issue in Pennsylvania."

Guffy said that Smith's greatest strength was in the industrial centers of Pittsburgh, Scranton, Wilkes-Barre and Lancaster.

Collins said that a vast majority of Pennsylvania voters favored modification of the Volstead Act to provide for the return of light wines and beer. He declared that the state was not interested in the tariff issue on which the Republican organization has indicated that it will center its campaign in Pennsylvania.

MILLIONAIRES OFFER TO WED MISS STONE

NEW YORK, July 25.—It now develops that a number of men, uncounted, but counting millionaires and laborers, are willing to give the little girl their hands in marriage.

The girl is Isobel Stone, daughter of a former governor of Pennsylvania, who attracted public attention a few days ago when it was discovered that she was living with her sister, Mrs. Richard O'Neill, as non-paying tenants of a leaky, squeaky houseboat, stranded on the upper Harlem.

The truth came out early this morning when Miss Stone, free verse poet, sculptor and former prima donna, once the heiress to half her father's $3,000,000 fortune, made her debut at Texas Guinan's Night Club.

The daughters had sunk to penury when they were discovered on the houseboat and Miss Guinan was one of the first to come forward and offer them a chance to get on their own feet through their own efforts. She gave Miss Stone a two-weeks' job as entertainer.

As Miss Stone stepped toward the piano for her first song, "A Kiss in the Dark," Tex took a stance on her perch on the floor and told the crowd:

"The little girl has had hard luck. But never mind—every cloud has a silver fox lining and this one will show the world she really is a governor's daughter. Give the little girl a hand."

When she had finished singing there was prolonged applause, and Miss Stone took her bows with the evident satisfaction of having succeeded.

Miss Stone told about the marriage offers, one from a sympathetic baker, but she said she wouldn't consider any matrimonial offer until she had climbed back to a solid position on her own feet.

How Strong Is Al Smith In Western Pennsylvania?

TO answer this question, that is heard everywhere in Pittsburgh today, the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph prints a ballot below.

These ballots will not appear every day, but occasionally; and on those days no extra papers will be delivered to any agent nor will papers be sold in bulk to any individual or organization. Ballots received in bulk will not be counted. No more than three in one envelope. Thus a fairly accurate estimate of the relative strength of Hoover and Smith may be secured.

Watch the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph for announcements of the results.

HOOVER ACCEPTS PROHIBITION ISSUE

METROPOLITAN PLAN FUND VOTED

An additional appropriation of $12,544 to the Metropolitan District Commission—approved yesterday by the Board of County Commissioners, with Charles C. McGovern dissenting—brings the total appropriation to $25,000, the law permitting $2 for each 100 inhabitants. The city of Pittsburgh has contributed $13,500.

The appropriation of the commissioners was made following a plea yesterday by A. L. Humphrey, who urged support for the Metropolitan District plan, saying, "All agree that one of the greatest blessings to this city and county would be to make this one great municipality to compare with Cleveland, St. Louis and other cities."

McGovern charged the entire plan was a one-man idea on the part of Joseph T. Miller, commission chairman, and would perpetuate the numerous boroughs and townships with all of their officers. "It would keep," he said, "124 tax collectors with their hands in the basket."

William E. Best, treasurer of the commission, explained that the only question before the voters at this time is the Constitutional amendment that would permit such a municipal district here. Later, he said, if the amendment should be approved the Legislature would adopt a charter which in turn would go to the people of Allegheny county for a vote. That charter, to be approved, would require a majority of all the votes cast in the county, together with a two-thirds vote in its favor in a majority of the municipalities.

FURTHER TEST OF DRY LAW TO BE URGED

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON.
International News Service.

PALO ALTO, Cal., July 25.—Prohibition will be made a definite issue in the approaching presidential campaign with Herbert Hoover taking the dry side of the argument in his speech accepting the Republican nomination, it was learned here today on good authority.

The Republican nominee, who virtually has completed his speech, will come out strongly for enforcement of the Eighteenth amendment and place himself on record as favoring a further test of prohibition. This will bring him into direct conflict with the known position of Gov. Alfred E. Smith, his Democratic rival for the Presidency.

Prohibition will become a real issue, one of his closest advistors said, because Hoover will not "pussyfoot" on the subject. His declaration on prohibition, it was said, will be far more emphatic than in his reply to the famous questionnaire of Senator William E. Borah last spring, in which the nominee appeared to take a middle-of-the-road attitude.

CAN'T AVOID IT

Hoover does not desire to make prohibition an issue, according to his advisers. The circumstances, however, are such that he cannot avoid it. He will simply speak his mind, it was said, but by doing so he undoubtedly will create an issue that may dominate in the East.

The Republican nominee will make Republican prosperity and a continuance of Republican efficiency in governmental affairs his outstanding issues. He will stress both beyond all other issues, but the decision as to their importance naturally lies with the voters.

Some of the high spots of his speech, which will be his interpretation of the Kansas City platform, and therefore the Republican campaign book, will include:

A careful analysis of the farm problem and a definite constructive program for alleviation of farm troubles.

A specific declaration in favor of the Republican protective tariff, couched in such language as to place the nominee definitely in the "high tariff" class of political economists.

A demand for a strong national defense, possibly even to the extent of demanding the strengthening of the American Navy pending further international disarmament treaties.

A declaration in favor of restrictive immigration with an expression that the present law is partially responsible for American prosperity.

A declaration in favor of the outlawry of war and for world conferences to develop arbitrative means of ending international disputes, but without indorsement of the League of Nations.

A declaration in favor of enforcing the Monroe Doctrine and an indorsement of the Coolidge administration's record in Nicaragua and other Central American republics as justified under that doctrine.

TO LAUD G. O. P.

Throughout his speech, Hoover will praise the record of the Republican party in recent administrations. He will declare for the fair treatment of business, without governmental interferences, but he will call for the protection of the rights of citizens.

The nominee was to spend today quietly in his home atop San Juan hill, overlooking the Stanford University campus. His guest list included but Henry Robinson, a Los Angeles banker and member of the Dawes commission, and Harry Chandler, Los Angeles publisher.

The nominee yesterday accepted an invitation to visit San Francisco Friday for a public reception. The invitation was extended by Mayor James Rolph, Jr., who spent an hour with Hoover. After their conference, Rolph said:

"I have extended an invitation to the next President to be the guest of our city in the city hall Friday noon and he has accepted it."

Hoover, who was standing beside the Mayor, observed: "That was a very truthful and very courteous statement."

SOLD RESTAURANT TO WED, CHARGES FIANCE RENEGED

Heart balm in the sum of $25,000 is asked by Miss Catharine Stanley, former North Side restaurant proprietor, in a suit for breach of promise she filed in Common Pleas Court yesterday against William Girth.

The young woman charges that he asked her to marry him September 15, 1927, but kept putting off the ceremony until on May 1, this year, she asked him when the wedding was to be and he told her he did not intend to marry her.

She says that at his insistence she had sold her restaurant at a loss, in anticipation of her marriage, and moved to Cedar avenue, where he had rented a house in which he said they would live. He paid the rent and she installed her furniture, after selling some that he did not like. He introduced her to friends as his fiance, she says, and gave her jewelry and money to use in the conduct of her business. Now she says she had been disgraced and humiliated, because her friends all knew she had expected to wed.

CRIPPLED BY FALLING; SUES BUILDING OWNERS

Charging he was injured so badly he will never again be able to leave his bed, U. Grant Miller, of McKees Rocks, filed suit for $25,000 damages against trustees of the G. T. Rafferty estate, owners of the Bakewell Building, yesterday in Common Pleas Court. He says that on May 8 he was descending the stairs between the seventh and sixth floors, when he slipped on an orange peel. He suffered concussion of the brain and spine. He asserts the stairway was dimly lighted and refuse had been allowed to lie on the steps.

GIRL KILLED BY AUTO

DRIVER HELD, PUTS BLAME ON VICTIM

An unidentified girl was struck and killed by an auto at Federal street and North avenue shortly after noon today. The driver, William McMillan, 16, of 1303 Warner street, arrested, admitted, according to police, that he did not have a driver's license and had failed in the driving test a week ago. He had a learner's permit, the police said, and was accompanied by an unnamed woman who held a driver's license.

McMillan told police that he was crossing Federal street with the traffic light in his favor when the girl, about 16 years old, darted from in front of a street car. She died a few minutes later in Presbyterian Hospital, her skull fractured.

HUSBAND TRIED TO DRIVE OVER CLIFF, WIFE CHARGES

Her husband tried to swerve their automobile over a cliff on the Lincoln highway in Westmoreland county and kill them both, it was charged in court yesterday by a wife. Grasping the steering wheel, she herself turned the car back onto the road, it was asserted by Mrs. Fannie Svirman in a bill of particulars filed in her divorce suit against Samuel M. Svirman.

She says this occurred in May, 1926, while they were living at Hermonie, Westmoreland County. Later, while they were living with her mother in Pittsburgh, she says Svirman came to her with a revolver and said he was going to shoot himself. Again she says she saved his life, grasping the gun. Last March, while they were living in Beechview, she says he choked her and threatened to kill her. Then she left him and sued for divorce.

Don't fool yourself:

Since halitosis never announces itself to the victim, you simply cannot know when you have it.

Halitosis makes you unpopular

If you are not as popular as you wish to be, look for the cause. Possibly it is halitosis (unpleasant breath)—the unpardonable social offense.

It is impossible for you to tell when you have halitosis. It never announces itself to you.

The one way to be sure of not having it is to rinse the mouth systematically every day with Listerine—especially before meeting others.

Being a powerful deodorant, it immediately ends halitosis.

If you have any doubt of its power as a deodorant, rub a little onion on your hand. Then apply Listerine clear. Immediately the odor is gone. Even the odor of fish yields to it.

Don't take chances of offending your friends and business associates when simply by using Listerine, you can put yourself on the polite, agreeable side. Lambert Pharmacal Company, St. Louis, Mo., U.S.A.

WHAT THEY SAY -:- AND HOW IT LOOKS -:- IN SOUND PICTURES

John Gilbert, Norma Shearer, Lon Chaney and Greta Garbo have their voices tested for the new "talking movies."

The device used in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios records photographs of the sounds of voice on a moving tape.

Here they are pictured saying words, the photographic record of lips and voice being made at the same time.

The translation of the graph of each player's voice is shown below the wavy sound lines, which will reproduce their words.

Film Life on Ocean Wave Proves Estelle Taylor to Be Qualified as "Good Trouper"

By REGINA CREWE

(Copyright, 1928, King Features Syndicate.)

ON LOCATION TWELVE MILES OUT FROM SANTA MONICA, CAL., July 25.

IF THIS is an example of a life on the ocean wave, or the life of a movie star, I am cured of all desire to be either a sailor or a cinema celes. Here we are, me and "The Sinafore Mutiny" company, of which Estelle Taylor is the star, 12 miles off shore in a ship which should have been manned by a lot of cowboys. It bucks and pitches like Hoot Gibson's horse. They tell me it is one of the "mystery ships" used during the war. The mystery is how it keeps afloat. However, all this has nothing to do with the picture, and I suppose the tossing of the craft will give Director Ralph Ince opportunities for a lot of new-fangled camera-angles.

Estelle is the only woman in the cast, and the actors who compose the mutinous crew don't need much make-up to look like a lot of Captain Kidd's playmates. Even Mr. Ince, himself, who is hero of the film as well as its director, looks capable of hanging a visiting movie writer from the yardarm of his vessel. Or from wherever folks are generally hung. They kid a lot about making sacrifices for "art" in the picture business, but when a star is subject to sunburn and seasickness, too, it certainly seems to me that she deserves a croix de guerre, or something, for making a film like this. But in the movies they simply say "She's a good trouper" and let it go at that. After this trip, I'll always describe Estelle as "a good trouper."

If I can write between waves I'll tell you that another angel has come to Hollywood. This is "The Shopworn Angel." And it is to be given its wings at the Paramount Studios, where Nancy Caroll and Gary Cooper have been teamed up to play the leading parts. The film will go into production as soon as Nancy has completed her present job opposite Richard Arlen. In the Carroll-Arlen picture, the famous Marion Morgan dancers will add to the gaiety of the customers. They must think a lot of Nancy on the Lasky lot to give her two such handsome juveniles one after the other to be her heroes.

Despite all the rumors that Lila Lee and James Kirkwood had called off all their matrimonial bets, Jim and Lila were spied serenely strolling down Hollywood boulevards as much absorbed in one another's conversation as though they were bride and groom. Jim has been abroad playing in the stage version of "The Barker" for many a month. Lila, meantime, has been going along like a house afire in fildom. She had been away from the screen for quite a while. Then made a "quickie" and did so marvelously that she has been in constant demand ever since.

Warner Brothers' big special, "Noah's Ark," will have the benefit of two directors working on it. Michael Curtiz directed all the early action, and now Roy Del Ruth is said to be in charge of megaphoning the sound sequences.

I hope that the yacht Aimee doesn't give as vivid an imitation of Gilda Gray as does this tub. For the Aimee is to carry Colleen Moore and her husband, John McCormick, on a rest trip following their "Lilac Time" triumph. This couple are inveterate sailors. They sailed recently through the Gulf of Mexico, and more recently to Honolulu. Present plans are for a seven weeks' cruise along the Pacific coast of South America. Cleve Moore, Colleen's kid brother, and Jack Stone, who did so well in the picture, will accompany Colleen and John. When she returns, it will be to make "Synthetic Gin," which will be released under another title. If Colleen has her way William Seiter will direct. P. S.: Colleen generally has her way.

Change Your "Skinny" Body for Attractive Curves

Gain pounds of weight with new YEAST and IRON in 3 weeks

Thin, Pale Girls Never Attract

Everybody Admires Graceful Curves

"Gained 6 Pounds"
"I was nervous and tired and my weight fell off. The improvement since taking Ironized Yeast has been wonderful. I have gained 6 pounds. Now my wife takes Ironized Yeast, too." —Mr. E. C. B., Portland, Ore.

If we could only show you the wonders Ironized Yeast has done for thousands of men and women. The bony hollows filled up with firm flesh; stringy necks and bony limbs given rounded beauty! Pimples, boils and blotches disappeared for good.

How Yeast and Iron Builds Quick Flesh and Health

Ironized Yeast is two tonics in one — weight-building Yeast and strengthening Iron. The yeast is the same used in making malt, and which makes malt so beneficial. It is specially cultured yeast, concentrated to give the utmost in flesh-producing value.

This Yeast is treated with pure, vegetable iron, the same as in spinach, lettuce and celery. In this form Iron is easily assimilated by the body, making rich, red blood and toning up nerves and muscles.

Only when Yeast is ironized in this way is it more effective—for Iron is needed to bring out the weight-building, strengthening values of Yeast. By this special formula Ironized Yeast gives you results in half the time required by yeast or iron taken separately.

NEWS MEN AT WORK SHOWN AT BELMAR, PLUS FEATURE

As versatile a group of comedians as ever assembled for one production makes "Lady, Be Good," at the Belmar Theater today and tomorrow, one of the funniest farces ever produced. Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill head the cast.

In addition to the picture, a two-reel feature, "Making a Newspaper," makes the program one of par excellence. This film depicts the production of a newspaper, from the time a reporter goes out on the story until the papers are delivered to its patrons.

The highly specialized departments of the newspaper, called the "most efficient manufacturing plant in the world," are brought before the reader's eyes, so that for the first time, in the opinion of critics, the newspaper reader learns just how a newspaper is "made."

"Making a Newspaper" will be exhibited at the Plaza on Friday and at the Arsenal Monday and Tuesday of next week.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIAL HAPPENINGS

With Lady Lindy Gone, Society Forgets Interest in Clouds and Turns Thoughts to Weddings

NOW that Lady Lindy has come and gone, folks are ready to forget for a little while their interest in the clouds, and come down to such mundane affairs as society events. All during the month everyone has ben talking about the sparseness of society news, but this week those interested in the realm of society don't have so much justification for complaints. There are two weddings for this week!

One took place yesterday and the second wedding of the week will be tomorrow, you know, when Margaret Crutchfield will marry Andrew Tod Roy.

The Sewickley stay-at-homes have been vieing with each other in entertaining for this popular bride-to-be and her bridal party.

Now added to the list of events planned in her honor is still another one. Anne Semple will give a luncheon not only for the bridal party, but for the out-of-town guests as well. The luncheon will precede the wedding, and it will be held in the hostess' home on Linden place, Sewickley.

A number of folks will come on for the wedding. William P. Penn, of New York, and his sister, Martha Penn, will be among the out-of-town guests. Way from Tuscumbia, Ala., will come the Rev. and Mrs. William Crowe, and from St. Louis will be Albin P. Crowe and Catherine Crowe. Representing Philadelphia will be Henry P. Van Busen, and Mrs. Stearly Garrett, of New York, will also attend.

BEFORE talking about the wedding yesterday, I want to tell you about some travel news. A number of Pittsburgh society folks who have relatives or daughters staying at Camp Mystic, Mystic, Conn., spent the past week-end there. Mrs. W. R. Blair, of Darlington road, who has a summer cottage at Kennebunkport, Me., was at Camp Mystic to visit her daughter, Mary.

Mrs. A. Rex Flinn, who is spending a good bit of the summer at Watch Hill as the guest of her sister, Mrs. Simon Patterson, also was a week-end visitor. Her niece, Nancy Patterson, is another camper at Mystic. James H. Hillman represented the men of the city at the camp.

FRANCES WILLIAMS, daughter of Mrs. Albert C. Williams, of Sewickley, became the bride of David Anderson Challis, Jr., son of the David Anderson Challises, of Sewickley, yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the living room of the Williams home. In that same living room her sister, the former Katherine Williams, became Mrs. Charles N. Harwood, of Stamford, Conn., and Frances' mother became Mrs. Williams.

The living room was decorated with ferns and a profusion of bright-colored garden flowers. The Rev. E. L. Biddle, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Cortland, N. Y., was the officiant.

The bride was given in marriage by her grandfather, Peter Seibert, and was attended by her sister, Mrs. Harwood.

The bride wore a coral chiffon, sleeveless afternoon dress, the skirt of which was fashioned with three tiers of chiffon. Her large hat was of the same shade, and her flowers were Columbia roses and lilies of the valley. Yellow chiffon was worn by Mrs. Harwood, whose hat was of black horsehair. She carried an arm bouquet of garden flowers.

The mother of the bride appeared in black chiffon and lace and had a corsage of dark red roses; the mother of the bridegroom wore black lace, and her corsage was of pinks.

Chester Challis was his brother's best man.

Following the wedding was a reception and a dinner. The junior Challises will motor through the South, and upon their return will reside on Blackburn avenue, Sewickley.

ANOTHER Sewickley social affair of yesterday was the garden luncheon and bridge which Mrs. James W. Oliver gave for Mrs. Robert Sargent and Miss Helen Grice. There were 16 guests. Mrs. Sargent, who formerly lived in Boston, has come to Pittsburgh to make her home and Miss Grice, who is a Philadelphian, is visiting Mrs. Richard W. Bailey, of Grove street, Sewickley.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES DWIGHT LESLIE, of Forbes street, have made known the marriage of their daughter, Miss Florence Adelia Leslie, and John Henry McConville, son of Mrs. Albert McConville, which was solemnized July 3 in Trinity Church, Toledo, O., by the Rev. Cedric C. Bentley.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

MAKE BELIEVE

By EVA WEIDENER.

PATTY looked at her wrist watch, whistled for her dog, carefully placed a small hat on her bobbed head and nodded approval to her image in the mirror.

"What is the new adventure?" her sister asked, looking up from a cross-word puzzle which she could not solve.

"Father is bringing young Mr. Bailey out by train and I am going to meet them. I'll drop Daddy at some convenient place, take the lad around to the country club, feed him, then drag him to a show for which I fortunately have tickets."

"You have your own little set of plans all laid for the new man," her older sister said, making a circle in the air with her lead pencil.

"Why not, Jane? He is a great many good things bundled into one package! Young, rich, healthy, handsome, good-tempered, and has Daddy's seal of approval as prospective son-in-law. I'm ready to meet him fifty, fifty."

"You are rather confident of your power to win," Jane declared mischievously.

"I am popular—a good sport," Patty answered.

"You are, at least, honest."

Patty's lips pouted; her forehead wrinkled into a frown.

"Perhaps you have plans of your own, Jane," she flung back haughtily.

"He sounds too good to be dropped down unattached on two marriageable girls," Jane laughed. "He probably has some terrible flaw—"

"I am determined to add him to the family. Money and power are things we need most, and I am hot on his trail."

"You are pretty as a butterfly, Patty and hard as nails—sometimes."

"I'm just a modern girl knowing exactly what I want and determined to get it, Jane—"

"Take care!" sister warned her. "You know you really are in love with that nice boy, Teddy."

"Patches upon patches. Excuse me. I'd be darning rags constantly with Teddy what a life!"

In the week which followed, Jane's mind was busy with the new situation. Patty appropriated the guest and there was no doubt as to her intentions. She loved Teddy, but she loved money and power more. Jane, who was less than three years older than her sister, admired the unspoiled young man with the happy face and fine ideals. Patty had no right to marry him and rob him of love.

Allen Bailey was so pleased with his visit that he finally engaged rooms at the Trenivian Inn for the summer. Patty was elated; Teddy Smith desperate and Jane helpless.

"Don't be a fool and waste your time complaining to me, Teddy," Jane told him. "Go in and win."

"But it isn't a fair fight, Jane," he told her. "He has money—"

"And you have love. Teddy, would you mind making love to me whenever Patty is around?"

Teddy, a bright and earnest chap, caught the idea at once. "You would be pretty well bored with my attention, Jane, for if I play that game to punish Pat, I'll play it to the limit!"

"Agreed!" said Jane, holding out her long slim hand.

Patty was greatly surprised when she came into the house one evening and found Teddy's arm around her sister's shoulder.

"Petting?" she asked, trying to seem unconcerned.

"We were just talking over old times," Teddy told her.

"Very interesting, no doubt."

When he had gone, Patty turned to her sister for an explanation.

"I am consoling Teddy, dear," Jane told her.

"Teddy calls you sister Jane," said Pat with a hard little laugh.

"A man often marries his real sister-in-law."

"It doesn't make any difference to me, Jane."

"Of course not; you are going to marry Allen. He is a fine man, almost as fine at Teddy."

"Teddy is a fool!" Patty said irritably.

"Because he has changed his mind?"

"Has he?" she asked, turning to face her sister.

"That's an embarrassing question, Patty," Jane blushed just the right shade of pink and Patty walked out of the room.

Jane reported the episode to Teddy later that week.

"There will be a crisis soon," he said. "Patty will have learned a lesson she has needed badly. Don't question me please, for it's a new and secret card I hold.

"Come on, Jane, it is time we were off for the Club."

"Ted," she said wearily, "I am sick of this make-believe."

"I am just becoming interested. I have a winner on hand for this afternoon."

Teddy broke the speed limit on his way until Jane begged him not to be so reckless. Then he drove so slowly that she told him she did not mean that he should stop the car.

He continued to move at a snail's pace until they were about to enter the country club grounds. He turned to Jane and told her to brace herself. Then he deliberately ran his car against a tree.

There was a shock, but neither were hurt. Jane was frightened, however, and clung to Teddy. "You did it on purpose," she sobbed. "I saw you. I think you have gone crazy."

Teddy held her close as he saw Allen Bailey running toward them. He slipped his hand over her mouth.

"Don't speak, Jane, pretend you are out like a light."

Jane was really hysterical by the time Allen Bailey reached the car.

"You fool!" he said to Teddy as he lifted Jane gently to the ground. "See to your car, I'll look after the girl."

Teddy sat down on the running-board and held his head in his hands as if in great pain for he saw Patty coming, not even pausing to speak to Allen or her sister.

Two hours later Patty entered her sister's room.

"Feeling better?" she asked.

"I'm all right," Jane replied. "It was very foolish of me to get so upset over a slight accident. Teddy was not not going fast, either."

"It's a wonder you both were not killed. Teddy was reckless—thought I was going to marry Allen. I've promised to marry Teddy."

Suddenly Jane understood what Ted's "winner" meant, and she laughed merrily.

"Is it so funny?" Patty asked coldly.

"Patches upon patches!" Jane quoted.

"What do I care for patches when Teddy is to be the patchee!"

Jane became sincerdely confidential.

"Patty," she began, "what do you think? Allen's asked me to marry him."

"Good," said Patty heartily, "I'd begun to sense that it was you he cared for all the time—and you playing up to Teddy"

"Let's have a double wedding, eh?" asked Jane.

"Let's," agreed Patty.

BY-PASSING FOR TRAFFIC RELIEF

CITIES REROUTE TRUNK ROADS

By SAMUEL THOMSON.

With more than 23,000,000 motor vehicles using the highways and streets of the country the by-pass road is essential. A few years ago it was the desire of civic organizations, highway associations and city boosters for the "main road" to pass directly down the main street. Today regional planners are routing traffic around the highly populated districts, thus relieving traffic congestion.

Forcing traffic through cities is no longer held advisable. When through traffic is led through the heart of a municipality the attendant congestion more than offsets the doubtful amount of increased business. Again the motorist is entitled to some consideration—congestion causes not only discomfort but it is uneconomical. Forward looking communities are solving the problem by designating and building by-pass routes which carry traffic around and not through the city.

In the Philadelphia-Camden district great circular roadways are being planned or are under construction. New Jersey is constructing a "crescent highway" around Camden. This roadway, from 28 to 56 feet in width, is part of a comprehensive plan formulated by New Jersey in the attempt to handle efficiently the large number of pleasure seekers traveling to and from New Jersey seaside resorts. By routing the highway to avoid Camden almost hopeless traffic jams are eliminated.

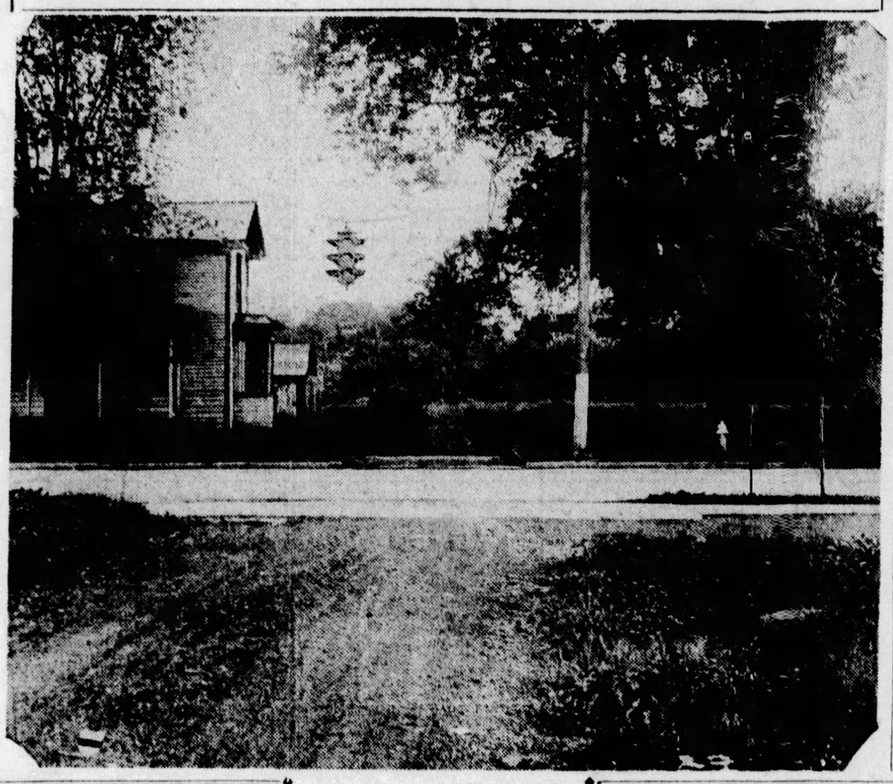
A wide express route is being planned between Chicago and Milwaukee. This highway will not enter directly into downtown Chicago, but will be routed west of the city to join the Lincoln highway. The Lincoln highway itself avoids the city so that through traffic will not be thrown on the city streets to add to an already complex traffic situation.

Most state highway departments are passing main through routes around towns and villages. Wide stub roads connect these high speed roads with the town for autoists caring to stop.

CONEMAUGH DIVISION VETERANS TO PICNIC

The annual picnic of the veteran employes of the Conemaugh Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad will be held at Griffio Park, near Apollo, Saturday.

MOTORISTS PROTEST MANY LIGHTS



SLOW UP TRAFFIC, AROUSE ANGER

Claiming that the modern automatic traffic light is hindering rather than aiding the free flow of traffic, motorists and motoring bodies are protesting the placing of such lights by smaller communities at all road intersections. The above photograph shows a "T" intersection in Big Run, Pa., controlled by a traffic light. Motorists claim a "Through Traffic-Stop" sign on the slightly used entering road would be just as efficient a safeguard as the traffic light.

SEVEN MILLION CAR STATES

New York state has the greatest number of motor vehicles of any state, there being 1,937,918 registered in 1927. New York also had the largest numerical increase over 1926, or 122,484. North Carolina had the largest percentage increase, 11.8.

Six other states had more than 1,000,000 cars, California having 1,693,155; Ohio 1,570,734; Pennsylvania 1,554,915; Illinois 1,438,985; Michigan 1,154,773, and Texas 1,111,407. Only two states, Florida and Arkansas, showed a decrease in registration in 1927.

Kansas had the most cars in proportion to population, there being 296 persons for every 100 cars. California came next with 299 and Iowa third with 372.

Now You Can Buy

VESS DRY

in a handy home carton—

SO great has been the demand for Vess Dry, the new ginger ale, that we have created a carton holding six bottles for home use. And at its price—30 cents—plus a small deposit for the bottles—there's no reason why this delicious beverage should not now be in every ice box in town.

Great for picnics—fine for Sunday suppers when the cold cuts need a sparkling, tangy beverage like Vess Dry "on the side!" In fact there's not an occasion when this pure and refreshing drink isn't a welcome guest.

Try Vess Dry Today

Try a five-cent bottle of Vess Dry today and compare it with any ginger ale regardless of price. Just make this test at any of the town's better drug, grocery and confectionery stores or soft drink stands. Then you'll understand why thousands welcome this opportunity to purchase Vess Dry by the carton instead of by the single bottle.

Not to be judged by the price

Many are mystified by the high quality and low price of Vess Dry. But the mystery is soon solved when you consider that every penny you pay goes for the best of ingredients and not for fancy labels, gold foil and other frills that add to the cost and not to the quality of other ginger ales.

Garages Now Permitted in Ocean Grove

Garages are no longer un-Christian in Ocean Grove, N. J. For 60 years, since the town's founding, an ordinance has prohibited the erection of any building within the community limits to house vehicles.

The trustees have at last decided that garages will not interfere with the conduct of Ocean Grove as a Christian community, provided the garages are fireproof and the doors are not opened on Sunday. As before, no vehicles, which means automobiles, will be allowed to travel the village streets on the Sabbath.

AUTOMOBILE NEWS

A. A. A. CHIEF CONFERS HERE

TOURING TOPICS DISCUSSED

Ernest N. Smith, general manager of the American Automobile Association, yesterday conferred with the Board of Governors of the Automobile Club of Pittsburgh, on road and touringactivities, and plans for extended services.

Mr. Smith's trip to Pittsburgh was made as part of a tour to the various motor clubs of the state affiliated with his organization. He has traveled thousands of miles in his trips to all parts of the country in the interest of motorists and is a frequent visitor to Pennsylvania.

Tonight at 6 o'clock, Mr. Smith will meet with the motorists of Wilkinsburg in the Penn-Lincoln Hotel. Tomorrow he will be devoted to the motorists of Greenville and the trip will be brought to a close with conferences in Oil City and Erie Friday.

Mr. Smith has been general manager of the A. A. A. since January 1, 1924, and during the period has been in active charge of the organization the number of clubs has increased from 250 to 1,065, while the individual membership has more than trebled. He has traveled more than 150,000 miles in connection with the work incident to motor club development, and the installing of national, interlocking, standardized motor club services. In addition, on him has fallen the task of prosecuting before Congress and other bodies the policies and programs of the American Automobile Association.

COLORS DEPICT SPEED

Color has come into the automotive scene as having an important relation to speed.

In looks alone, color gives a car the appearance of speed, says T. Ledyard Towle, color advisor.

But, he adds, automobiles should be finished for high visibility because of the higher speed we drive cars now.

"Many a fender has been bent, if nothing worse, because the driver just did not see the other fellow," he says.

BOY DROWNED IN EFFORT TO RECOVER GUM BALL

AMBRIDGE, Pa., July 25.—Trying to recover a rubber ball, Rocco Dimaiolo, 11, fell from a barge into the Ohio River yesterday and was drowned.

WHAT'S ON THE AIR

"THE IDOL'S EYE," a comic opera by Victor Herbert, written from the book by Harry B. Smith, will be produced as the Philco Hour feature with Jessica Dragonette and Colin O'More in the leading roles tonight at 9 o'clock. It will be heard from KDKA.

This operetta was produced in New York in 1897. Its scenes are in the British regimental officers' quarters in Bombay, India, and in the Temple of the Ruby. Harold Sanford is the musical director.

The plot opens with the theft of one of the priceless jewelled eyes of a Brahmin idol. The remaining eye is called the Eye of Hate—the stolen one, a ruby, is the Eye of Love, the possession of which make all women fall madly in love with its possessor. A Scotch vagabond, James McSnuffy, has committed the robbery and then attempts suicide, from which he is prevented by Abel Conn, an American magician and aeronaut.

To save himself from the clutches of Damayanti, an East Indian dancing girl, and the Brahamin priests who are in search of the priceless stone, McSnuffy "plants" it on Conn, who by law of the land is responsible for all McSnuffy's acts. The Scotchman is regarded as dead, as any attempt at suicide makes a person dead in theory, if not in reality, and a slave to his preserver.

The second act holds many amusing complications resulting from the stone's changing possession, the stealing of the idol itself, and Abel Conn's impersonation of the idol. The last act clears up all the mystery and the opera ends happily for all.

A subplot introduces the love of a young American, Ned Winner, for Maraquita, a Cuban maiden, the daughter of Pablo Tobasco, a planter, who is traveling in India in search of big game. The Don will not allow his charming daughter to wed anyone but a very rich man. The wily Ned Winner, however, true to his name, checkmates the father at the end.

The latter half of the Philco hour will be taken up with excerpts from various other musical plays and operettas.

A new term, "atmospherics," describes the program to be broadcast at 9 o'clock tonight by WJAS, from the studio of WOR. This new term was originated to describe programs creating a certain atmosphere of location or sentiment. It applies very aptly to a program such as 'Forest and Meadow," in which presentation will be heard "Wild Rose," "Forest Murmurs," "Mill in the Forest," "Forest Pathway," "Pastorale" and "The Hunt."

SIX VICTORIOUS MONTHS for THE VICTORY SIX

When the Victory Six was announced six months ago it was the talk of the town.

What would it look like? What would it do? Would it be different from other cars? In what way? And so on.

Then the public saw the Victory Six!

Its freshness of design was a revelation. It was different. Like no other car.

Rakish and trim—low and graceful—smart hued and colorful—it captured the eye. Immediately.

Look again. Wider seats—more leg space. Big! Roomy!

Then it proved, in operation and performance, the promise suggested by its beauty.

Swift pick-up—smoothness—speed.

Dodge Brothers dependability again!

It was a great car then; it is an even greater car now.

It has stood the test.

Each month has seen a substantial increase in Victory Six sales.

Not because of what we have been saying for six months. Or because of what we say now.

But because of what the Victory Six is.

The snappiest, best looking, speediest car in its class.

A car you should try out—now—yourself at the wheel

CASHIER KIDNAPED IN BANK HOLDUP SAFE

LAMONT, Okla., July 25.—(AP.)—Two men who robbed the First State Bank at Lamont yesterday, kidnaping the cashier, Harry Mathias, apparently have made good their escape, with loot estimated at from $1,200 to $1,500. Mathies was released unharmed after a 12-mile ride into the country with his captors.

The two men, about 25 years old, found him alone in the bank, Mathias said and asked if he could do some notary public work for them. When he entered a small office, the cashier said one of the men drew a gun and covered him while the other scooped up the cash. They forced Mathias to enter the car.

The robbers, the cashier said, drove about 12 miles northeast toward Blackwell, where they tied his hands and feet and left him in a corn field. Then, Mathias said they drove on in an easterly direction. They were driving a large sedan bearing an Oklahoma license plate.

The cashier released himself and rushing to a nearby telephone spread the alarm. A posse was formed immediately and started in pursuit.

Ex-Dragon Refuses To Talk

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., July 25.—(AP.)—Challenging Attorney General Arthur L. Gilliom's right to question him, D. C. Stephenson, former Klan grand dragon, last night declined an invitation to tell his version of the death of Miss Madge Oberholtzer, for whose murder he is now serving a life sentence; gave prison officials a clean slate regarding his treatment, and said he placed little faith in the "alleged appeal" for a new trial now pending before the Indiana Supreme Court.

Attorney General Gilliom sought the information in a deposition in connection with a mandamus suit brought in Stephenson's behalf in the LaPorte Circuit Court in which an order on prison officials is asked to permit him to have private conferences with his attorneys. The prisoner's attorneys ask that the suit be dismissed, declaring they already had won their point and that satisfactory meetings would be granted in the future.

Gilliom objected, however, and obtained a continuance until tomorrow. The effort to take the deposition was made as a part of that suit.

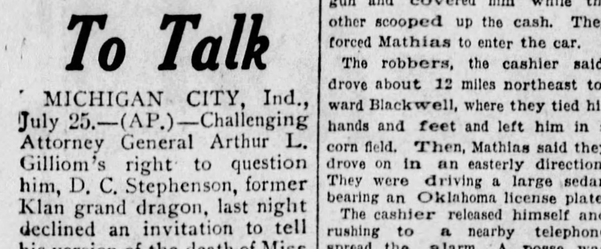
Stephenson said he believed his only chance to get a new trial from his conviction at Noblesville in November, 1925, rested in a petition for a writ of coram nobis—granted only where a convicted person shows he was denied the chance of giving his real defense at a trial through fear of violence or death if he attempted to do so. Stephenson contended that it was because he feared for his life that he did not testify in his own behalf at the Noblesville trial.

Canoeists, Steamer Crash

Intending to ride the waves of a passing steamboat, two McKees Rocks boys, who dashed out of the darkness against the side of the vessel, narrowly escaped drowning when their canoe was capsized.

William Rudman, 19, of 326 Olivia street, McKees Rocks, grabbed the rigging of the steamer and was hauled aboard. Frank Lebun, 20, of Hamilton street, McKees Rocks, after being thrown into the water caught his canoe, righted it, and paddled back to shore.

Rudman was taken before Capt. John R. Douglas of the steamer and reprimanded and later put ashore and went home. Rivermen complain that canoeists without lights have been in the habit of darting out of the darkness to ride the waves, and it is hard for the pilots to see them.



FAME is not acquired easily and even when acquired it mustn't be what the rest of us in the mob think it is. Amelia Earhart's visit to Pittsburgh's sidewalks yesterday caused such an observation. Other cases, too, are on the record to show that fame is not entirely sweet. One of the first things celebrities seem to do after acquiring fame is to take steps to protect themselves from the acclaim they once dreamed about.

To get close to Miss Earhart, the popular aviatrix, was no easy task as the reporters on the job will tell you. There was quite a picket line to crash through and so desperate was one reporter in getting his copy that he blandly posed as a minor city official, working on the program for the day of welcome, to make his way through the thickets of protection which hedged Miss Earhart.

* * *

LINDBERGH tired of the mob rather quickly. A history of the late Valentino indicated that being the cynosure of all eyes was not to him what it was cracked up to be. Dempsey and Tunney often resort to ruses to escape what they once envisioned as the nectar of life—a milling mob of admirers.

Miss Earhart, by the way, is conceded to be a most gracious heroine. While welcoming the blanket of protection wrapped about her by her escorts on her current trip, once her throne room is gained, the queen of the air is all pleasantry. A reporter who visited with her said she was not pretty, but that the character written in her face gave her an appeal that transcended the conventional idea of beauty and made the popular concept of beauty insignificant by comparison.

IF THIS is very old, stop us. The porter could not find the ladder to give to a man about to crawl into an upper berth. The porter could not understand how the ladder had disappeared. "I don't know what you'll do," said the porter. "That was the only ladder here." Suddenly a head appeared from the curtains of another berth. "Here you can use my ladder," said a sleepy voice. "I won't be needing it again until morning."

Maybe you wouldn't like this even if it were new.

Work suddenly stopped on the steel skeleton of a downtown building. The riveting machines stopped their racket. The men were hauled down from their perilous perches. Reason: A fellow workman had fallen and had received serious hurts, and when this happens the rest of the crew knock off work for the day. It helps to keep their nerves steady.

* * *

SUMMERTIME sees a decrease in the number of beggars on the streets. The more wealthy ones leave town for the summer resorts where they combine pleasure with a little business.

Street scenes: A group of tots in the Lawrenceville section going in bathing through the medium of a hose which philanthropic street cleaners kindly turn in their direction . . . A blind man playing a joyous banjo and singing a jass song to attract pennies into his cup . . . A deaf mute reciting to a fellow deaf mute some interesting poetry . . . There was rhythym in his fingers, anyway . . . A traffic policeman, off duty, standing at his corner talking to his pinch-hitter . . . That man downtown who carries an umbrella, tightly wrapped. In this way he disguises his fondness for a cane.

CAR ABANDONED IN COLUMBUS

This small coupe, abandoned in Columbus, O., where it required police a week to connect it with the case, is the only clue in the purported kidnaping of Norma Morman, 20-year-old bookkeeper, 3407 Bates street, Oakland, last May 15. Here Police Sergeant T. A. Scully, Columbus, thoroughly examines the car, which still carries its original unusual license plates, numbered with five "sixes."

COL. HARRY C. FRY

The oldest pilot to apply for an aviator's license in Pennsylvania is Col. Harry C. Fry, 62, head of the aeronautics committee of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce. He holds a federal license as a private pilot and will be registered by the state without examination.

INSOLVENCY PETITION ONLY KEY TO JAIL DOORS

Michael Palermo, 35, of McKeesport, in jail "from now on" unless a $20 fine is paid, so far as his commitment is concerned, may obtain his release within two or three months by an insolvency petition.

That appears to be the only hope disclosed by an examination of the law by District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner and his assistants. Gardner conferred with Warden John McNeil, inquiring about the prisoner's status.

Palermo was fined $20 for cruelty to his horse. He was accused of operating on the animal, suffering from a sore shoulder, using a razor and causing its death. Palermo was unable to pay the fine and Alderman James J. Lundie of McKeesport committed him to jail until it is paid.

The statute merely provides for a fine for the offense, without the alternative of a prison sentence. An unusual provision of the law is an allowance of appeal to Quarter Sessions Court, the criminal branch. Customary appeal from a summary conviction is to County Court, to question legality of conviction or punishment. Appeal by Palermo to Quarter Sessions would be unavailing, as jury trials will not be held until September. If he appealed and pleaded guilty, which would be inconsistent, he could be paroled, according to those arguing his cause. Warden McNeil may produce the prisoner before Quarter Sessions Court Thursday to settle the question.

Girl Saves 2 as Auto Topples

ALIQUIPPA, Pa., July 25.—Savina Hilger, 19, New Sheffield, stenographer, rescued Lillian Emijanac, 2, and her sister, Sophie Emijanac, 4, from a runaway auto. The car was demolished a moment later.

The baby was playing inside and the older child on the running board of a car parked at their home. It started down a hill as Miss Hilger passed. She jerked the older girl from the running board, then hopped into the auto and rescued the baby and jumped off. A moment later the car crashed into a ravine 100 feet below.

Beat Death

AUDREY STANLEY

Audrey Stanley, 10, Nelsonville, O., stumbled between railroad tracks as a speeding locomotive bore down on her. Huddled between two ties, she hugged the ground as the engine and two passenger cars passed over her. Then she got up, an arm bruised, otherwise well!

20 Escape Crossing Crash

More than 20 passengers aboard a Homestead street car narrowly escaped death or injury yesterday at the Amity street crossing of the Pennsylvania Railroad in Homestead.

Prompt work by the motorman in reversing the car and the speed of M. Albright, railroad ticket agent, who dashed up the track and flagged an approaching passenger train, saved the street car riders.

As the car started over the tracks, the motorman saw a train approaching and reversed his car. Albright saw the train at the same time and dashed up the tracks and flagged it. The train was stopped within a few inches of the car.

PADLOCK ONLY UPPER FLOORS

The legal department of Prohibition Administrator John D. Pennington's office today announced that the "padlock" injunction decree signed yesterday by Federal Judge R. M. Gibson as to the property at 416 Sixth avenue, applies only to the second and third floors, formerly occupied by the Typo Club.

The restaurant on the first floor was in no way involved, it was said. The decree was against only the alleged proprietors of the club. A previous court decree permits the owner of the property, Frank J. Lanahan, to make alterations on the second and third floors, and later petition the court for permission to lease the two floors to other tenants upon filing a $500 bond, approved by the court.

DO YOU KNOW YOUR OWN "TRAFFIC COP?"

MAKE HIS ACQUAINTANCE

You do not know the corner "traffic cop" who sweeps you through with a smile every day, do you? Would you like to know him, know his name and a little about him? The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph is publishing a series of pictures of Pittsburgh "traffic cops." Here is one for today. His name tomorrow!

YESTERDAY'S "TRAFFIC COP" WAS DEWEY A. M'CULLOUGH, MARRIED, 611 SANDUSKY STREET, NORTH SIDE. HE HAS SPENT 10 YEARS AS A MOUNTED POLICEMAN IN THE GOLDEN TRIANGLE.

May Save Obregon Slayer

International News Service.

MEXICO CITY, July 25.—Possibility that Jose de Leon Toral, slayer of President-elect Alvaro Obergon, may escape death for his deed loomed today.

Leaders of the Obregonista faction believe that Toral was only a tool in the hands of the Laborites. In a public statement they demanded the removal of all Laborite officials from office, saying that members of this minority party had played upon Toral's fanatical religious views in such a way as to bring on the slaying.

In the same statement they said that removal of the Laborites would be true justice and that the death of the assassin was not necessary.

Meanwhile the police are still searching for Manuel Trejo, who, Toral confessed, stirred him up to kill Obregon and put the death weapon in his hand. The deposed Laborite secretary of industry and commerce, Morones, is still in hiding.

The resignation of Luis Morones as Secretary of Labor has been accepted officially and it is expected now that unofficial selection of a provisional President of Mexico will come within the next few days.

Leaders of the Obregon group, returning to the capital from the funeral of Gen. Alvaro Obregon, in Sonora, are expected to confer and decide upon the man who will take the place to which Obregon was elected a few weeks prior to his assassination.

President Plutarco Calles still seems the most likely choice, but there is a question whether he will accept the provisional presidency, even if a law is created to permit him to succeed himself.

MERCER POORHOUSE CONTRACT AWARDED

MERCER, Pa., July 25.—Troutman & Cristman, of Sharon, have been awarded the contract for the erection of the addition to the county poorhouse.

EFFORT TO LIBERATE PHYSICIAN FAILS

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., July 24.—(AP.)—While the detectives and police were endeavoring to establish a motive for the brutal murder of Mrs. Gladys Gifford Hoffman at Ashley early Sunday morning, friends of Dr. H. H. Hoffman, her husband, who is being held on suspicion, made an attempt to secure his release from the Wyoming barracks of the state police by habeas corpus proceedings.

State and Ashley police and the district attorney's detective staff were busy today in trying to establish a motive for the crime which they believe was committed by Dr. Hoffman.

One new clue in the case was the discovery of a small pool of blood in the cellar of the Hoffman home, near the furnace. Confronted with this discovery, Dr. Hoffman insisted that he had not been in the cellar following his discovery of his dying wife on Sunday morning.

Reports that Dr. Hoffman had been brutal to his first wife were denied today by his attorney, John H. Dando, who declared that three brothers of the first Mrs. Hoffman had come to his office and volunteered to do everything in their power for Dr. Hoffman, in whom they believed.

Hold 3 as Kidnapers Of Girl

CHARLEROI, Pa., July 25.—The mysterious kidnaping of pretty Lucinda Boyce, 15-year-old high school girl of Bellevernon, the flaunting of her "wierd tale" of being forced away from home at the point of a gun by two Monessen youths, and her subsequent arrest in a Monessen hotel on a charge of suspicion, came suddenly back into the limelight today with startling developments.

Discounted as the highly-colored story of a "boy-crazy" girl, the tale was found to be true after the arrest of three prominent Monessen youths and their arraignment on specific statutory charges. They are: Owen Brown, 22; Lewis Brown, 21, and Henry Laird, 23. Each gave $1,500 bail before Alderman A. R. Conway, of Monessen.

Two other Monessen youths, Fred Harrison and Harold Shepler, both 23, are being sought and will be arraigned as accessories before the fact.

The girl was forced away at the point of a gun by Shepler and Harrison, according to her story, and later turned over to Brown, Boyd and Laird, who kept her in Monessen and Charleroi hotels. She was hauled in an automobile, gagged and bound, to Monessen, where she was kept in the Union Hotel.

Later a man known only as "Jess" rescued the girl from an East Monongahela liquor joint, where she was unconscious from a drug administered in drinking water and brought her to the Wellington Hotel, Charleroi, she said.

Vare Quiz Here on Aug. 15

PHILADELPHIA, July 25.—(AP.)—A four-day session of the Senatorial committee investigation into the Vare-Wilson election of 1926 will be held in Pittsburgh beginning August 15. The announcement was made by Senator Charlns W. Waterman, Republican, of Colorado, who is conducting hearings here as a one-man committee.

Since last December the committee has been investigating the election as a result of the contest brought by William B. Wilson, Democrat, defeated by William S. Vare, Republican, for the Senate. This committee has no connection with the recent Reed campaign fund inquiry.

It is hoped to take up the completed case before the full Senate committee August 21 at Washington.

Fifteen Philadelphia election judges were examined yesterday.

Each was asked by David Wallerstein, chief counsel for Wilson, how many ballots had been issued in his division for the election, how many used, and how many returned to the county commission as spoiled or unused.

Hassell's Hop-Off Halted

ROCKFORD, Ill., July 25.—(AP.)—The flight of the "Greater Rockford," which was to have started at 5 a. m. today was postponed until tomorrow morning because of unfavorable weather predictions.

Pilot Bert Hassell stated that a United States Weather Bureau report, received after the big plane had been loaded with gasoline, indicated adverse headwinds would be encountered today throughout the Canadian portion of the flight.

"Our gasoline supply will not hold out if we are not favored with tailwinds at least 50 per cent of the trip," Hassell said.

Lightning Fires Street Car; One Hurt

READING, Pa., July 24.—(AP.) — Lightning struck a street car on the Boyertown line last night, setting fire to it and causing considerable damage before a Moyertown fire company arrived. The motorman, Charles Angstadt, who was alone on the car, suffered severely from shock.

The storm caused much damage in the district, large trees being uprooted and large numbers of fruit trees being stripped of peaches, apples or pears.

Policeman Held in Slaying

Patrolman Frank P. Caslin today was held on a charge of murder by a coroner's jury inquiring into the death of James T. Sutton, Negro, of 421 Rosedale street, who was shot during a crap game at 7302½ Tioga street, on July 11, when the patrolman became involved in a quarrel with him.

Will Rogers Says

BOSTON, Mass., July 25.

It looks like this state of Massachusetts is going for Smith. If it does, it will be a blow against Harvard's English department.

They are becoming discouraged anyway. Our English is getting worse than our habits.

Tunney is going to fly to the fight. Just before every fight Gene flys there. He would be a great booster for aviation if he fought often enough.

He does that to disconcert the other fellow. That left hand of Gene's will disconcert Heeney more than ever Lindbergh's flight did.

I told Heeney he should go to the fight in a captive balloon.

Good luck to you, Graham McNamee, and here's hoping you don't have static.

Yours, WILL ROGERS.

CHILDREN PUT MILK, ICE FUND OVER $800 MARK

And now watch the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Milk an Ice Fund go sailing right on up to $900. It tops the $80 mark today with two gifts, both of which come from childre as do the majority of fund donations.

First on the list is $3.50 from two little girls of Fair Oak street, Edith Barnett and Lois Goldsmit, who sold candy and lemonade to raise their share for the city's poor babies.

A vaudeville show on Graham street netted the fund $15, the second of today's donations. This was raised by Jean Maloney, Anna Mae and Dolores Bearrow, Mary Truxell, Helene Frame, Rita Chess, Agnes and Dorothy Brown, Jean Colt, Ruth Pearlman and Louise Kelley.

Vaudeville shows and lawn fetes vie with each other as favorites for Milk and Ice benefits, although the old tried and true lemonade stand is a close second. Probably more money has been raised for the fund through shows and lawn fetes than in any other way. Through the former the youngsters are able to give vent to their desire to dress up and display their talents, while at the latter business ability is brought out and instinct for beauty is given expression in the decorations of the stands and tables from which the smiling-faced lads and lassies dispense their wares.

Previously reported	$784.21
Fair Oak street candy and lemonade stand	3.50
Vaudeville show	15.00
Total	$802.71

ARDEN STRIKERS FINED FOR BLOCKING WORK

WASHINGTON, Pa., July 25.—Seventeen strikers at the Arden mine, north of Washington, were arrested by State Policeman Rudolph Fahifeder and charged with disorderly conduct before Alderman John F. Carmichael, here. Each was fined $1 and costs. Several, unable to pay the fine, were committed to jail, but later released when friends raised the amounts. Fahifeder charged that the men were obstructing the operation of the mine.

Your Blood Cells Control Blood Pressure

Just why do insurance companies insist upon accurate blood pressure readings, before they issue insurance? Obviously, if they are unwilling to issue insurance on your life without first knowing your blood pressure, it must be exceedingly important. If accurate knowledge gives such important information concerning your health and length of life that financiers are unwilling to gamble their dollars without knowing it, you certainly cannot afford not to know something of this important subject since your health is at stake.

When the blood pressure is only moderately increased, there may be no symptoms whatever unless the condition is accidentally discovered during a physical examination. There is usually no early sign to warn of the insidious diseases and if permitted to progress will only end in heart failure or apoplexy.

BLOOD CELL SERUMS were perfected after many years of painstaking work. Their therapeutic value has been conclusively proven.

BLOOD CELL SERUMS cleanse the blood stream, removing the poisons, thus the natural process of nourishing your body is restored. Nature fights disease through the medium of the blood. White blood cells is your army of protection. To purify, strengthen and enrich it is the one sure avenue of medication. WHY DRUG THE STOMACH WHEN YOUR BLOOD CELLS CONTROL HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE?

One Serum gives relief in many cases. Patients pay for the Serums only. No Doctor Charges.

THERE is an extraordinary echo in the Cathedral at Pisa. If you sing two notes there is no reverberation, but if you sing three they are taken up, swelled and prolonged into a beautiful harmony.

The CONSTANT FLAME

Life Often Settles Its Problems; Marty's Love For Emily Has Cooled

"WHEN she stooped for it the lace mantilla she wears caught on the shutter and those threads were torn away.

"You see I know something about fabrics and I believe that is genuine Spanish lace. You seldom find it in America, not as fine as that. Unless it's brought over by someone like her."

She saw his amazement. "You don't think it possible?"

"Of course it's possible. Clever reasoning. But there's no break in the comb."

"That's the only thing I can't account for. You see it's an antique, really, and there ought to be a row of little daggers at the top. Like this." She brought the color print from her bag and spread it before him, pointing to the picture of the comb as it should be.

He studied the picture, held the comb under the table light and studied that. In the end he ran his knife along the shining edge of tortoise shell. Emily suppressed a cry as yellow flakes scaled off.

"Lacquer," he said, laconically. "There are little rough places on the edge. Breaks. You were right; there should be a row of daggers. Not only that; there was a row."

"But—"

"It would have been simpler for her to have destroyed the comb. But there may have been a number of reasons why she didn't wish to. Sentiment, maybe, or its value. So she filed off the daggers and covered the breaks with lacquer."

"Then—" Vivid with earnestness she leaned toward him. "Then we can have her arrested? Tonight? Prove she was there? It's all settled isn't it?"

"The shake of his head chilled her. "More to be done, you know. Don't look like that; it's a matter of a week or so. Keep your heart high, Emily."

They were interrupted here by a big fellow in the uniform of a club employe. He slithered in and stood at Kent's elbow.

"The steward said you wanted to see me, Mr. Rossiter?"

"Yes, Joe. Do you remember the night Mrs. Wickert came here and tried to shoot her husband?"

"I'll say I do." It was me dragged her out the back way screechin' like mad. Why wouldn't I remember when she bit my finger half off? She's a hell-cat, that dame."

"Just what was it she said?"

"Let's see now. Something about how she'd do it. Yeah, that's it. She yelped, 'I'll get him! Wait and we'll see!'"

"You're sure she said, 'I'll get him?'"

"Sure I'm sure. Swear it any place, Mr. Rossiter." And he nursed a finger reminiscently.

"All right, Joe. I may ask you to do that. Keep it to yourself, now."

"I'll say. Just you give me the office when you want me. I'll tell 'em."

Kent smiled with a flash of the old merriment after the man had gone. "Did I say a week? Perhaps a day or two. There's no crime that doesn't leave open a weak spot somewhere; a link to connect it with the criminal. We'll turn up the link, Emily."

He took her home soon afterward and she fund Marty there. She had a moment of anxiety when she realized that he might precipitate a scene by telling of her meeting with Kent. But if he knew about it he said nothing.

He had been urging something upon Kitten and they both fell silent when she came in. It was depressing enough with Marty aloof, rather scornful, and Agnes making futile little attempts at friendliness.

But Emily did not feel the gloom. She had an odd sense of lightness and freedom; a happiness she hadn't known for years wrapping her like a luminous haze. It was too poignant, too beautiful to be affected by anything these others might feel.

She walked out to the porch with Marty when he left and stood smiling up at him in the dim moonlight. Too late she understood that he took her attitude for invitation; that he thought she wished him to kiss her.

"You've waited to long for that, Em," he said.

"For what, Marty? I don't understand."

"Yes you do. That time's past."

She asked, somewhat vaguely, "You don't like me? You've stopped liking me, Marty?"

A flicker crossed his eyes but he laughed. "What's that got to do with it? We may as well be frank. And sensible. Suppose they do hang it on her? I'd be in a fine position married to her sister. Wouldn't I, now?"

She looked away quickly, shaken by the stark brutality of his words.

One thing she wished to be sure about, however. "You didn't come here to help Kitten because of friendship? Not because you wanted to do a kind thing for us?"

"I'm in the law business, Em."

She laughed then, rather shakily, and told him good-night.

But in the sunroom a bit later the luminous haze flowed back, wrapped her in sweetness. "I hope Agnes won't mind," she thought. "After all, life often settles its own problems."

She stood in the window, looking at the stars. It occurred to her that another problem might be forming about her which life might not settle so easily.

CHAPTER LIII.

EMILY had a visitor at the shop next day.

She had been thinking about Marty, wondering a great deal, trying to understand the processes which would turn one so essentially proletarian as the Nolan into a snob.

For Marty was that now, she decided. As much a snob as Kingdon Coles. Like him, Marty would make his affections fit his interests.

Coles wouldn't marry a middle-class girl no matter how much he might love her. And Marty would turn from the girl he had thought himself in love with all his life because disgrace threatened her.

Or was that the real reason? She remembered the morning she had gone to Morrows' office and what she had seen there. Marty and Anne approaching the ground glass door; their shadows merging as Anne lifted her face for his kiss.

Perhaps his ambition had led him to looking higher for a wife than The Hill. Perhaps he intended to marry Anne some day.

Coles was blue-blooded and Marty was not, but they were alike. Both snobs. Apparently it was made up of the lowly as well as the high in place, the thing Frances Halden called "snobocracy."

This clashed with the theory her father had held, of course; the supposition that it was only those born to wealth and power—the classes—who oppressed the masses. But now she wondered if certain members of the lower strata might not be tyrannical enough, given opportunity.

Perhaps it was not a matter of class and mass but of individuals.

In a dim way she always had hoped for something rather fine from Marty. But this was the end of that hope.

Smiles—The Melody Bringers

"Smiles from Reason Flow— And Are of Love the Food."

Drawn by Dorothy Flack

© 1928 by Int'l Feature Service, Inc. Great Britain rights reserved.

SMILES are to a dreary world what the notes are to a lovely melody, the tiny dots which in themselves mean nothing at all, but played together produce a soul-inspiring song which lightens the burden of life. Sometimes they are happy smiles; sometimes the sad smile which covers an aching heart; sometimes the Madonna smile, such as you see on the face of a mother as she bends adoringly over the tiny babe nestling close to her heart. But they're smiles—notes in the symphony of life.

And, as that blind poet Milton so exquisitely words it: "Smiles from reason flow—and are of Love the food." They are, you know, for can you picture Love without smiles For happiness, which is love, brings smiles, and smiles mean joy and joy in turn means the bubbling beauty emanating from a pure heart. And then come the tiny ripples of soft, happy laughter—the melody which is born of a smile.

So if you've lost the smiling habit, hurry and find it again. See that you cultivate the smiling countenance which comes from a happy heart. Not the meaningless doll smile which you see some girls wearing; but the happy, spontaneous smile which only comes from a joyous heart. For in this way Love will find you and know that there dwells all the beauty which should be Love's share. For when you're one of the notes of Love's symphony, you're bound to find the true melody of life, which comes only to those who truly love.

Mumps Is a Serious Affliction

WE get no sympathy if we have the mumps. This is one affliction which usually causes our friends to laugh. Of course, this is because the victim looks so funny.

DR. COPELAND

While there is no particular time of year when mumps are not prevalent, yet the spring and fall find this disease almost epidemic among children. Just what causes mumps has not yet been discovered, but it is believed to be a disease of germ origin.

As a rule boys suffer with mumps more than girls and only an occasional adult has it. It is infectious or "catching" and on this account spreads rapidly in a school.

The incubation period, that is, the period between exposure and the first symptom, is from two to three weeks. Then there is a fever. It may be slight or it may rise to 102 or 103 degrees.

The first symptom, even before fever is noticed, may be pain below the ear. Then the swelling begins. It starts below the lobe of the ear, forcing the lobe outward. Soon the swelling progresses and spreads to the tissues back of the ear and in front of the ear.

As the trouble progresses, it involves the glands along the jaw and under the tongue. It then passes to the other side of the neck.

This swelling and the soreness and pain, caused by it, make eating, or opening the mouth, a very painful process. Accompanying the swelling may be earache and some disturbance of hearing. The ear symptoms are not observed in every case.

Many children go through mumps with no other discomfort than that of being the butt of the jokes of the family and friends. They are the lucky ones.

There are sometimes complications such as inflammation of the breast, enlargement of the thyroid gland and swellings of other glands. These are uncommon and need give you no worry.

The chief thing to do in mumps is to keep the affected child from other members of the family. Be sure the bowels move freely, give liquid or semi-liquid diet and keep the patient in bed during the period of the fever. If medicine is required your doctor will prescribe it.

Fortunately mumps rarely recur in the same individual.

Love's Embers

Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

By ADELE GARRISON

Lillian Believes Dicky Has the Key to the Mystery

AT Lillian's query concerning the knowledge of his sketching Miss Lincoln possessed by Noel Veritzen and young Mr. Jackson, an odd hesitant look came into Dicky's eyes.

"She has asked Noel to say nothing to his father or anyone else, for that matter, about the sketches," he said, "and Noel, of course, has promised to be silent. But she is as afraid of young Jackson's finding out about the sketches as she is of old Veritzen making the discovery. She has managed the thing very cleverly, however, and I am sure young Jackson knows nothing about her posing for the sketches. I think we may rest easy now, every avenue appears blocked. Thank you very much, Madge, for your aid in the matter."

He went out into the yard a bit hastily, but not hurriedly enough to escape the taunting call which Lillian sent after him.

"Madge says not to mention it," she gibed, "that it was a pleasure to help anybody as sweet-tempered as you always are, and that you are to call on her again whenever you want any muzzling done."

He shook a fist at her as he rounded the corner of the house, but he was laughing. Lillian, however, was not in a mirthful mood.

"What a lamming that lad needs!" she said truculently. "Did you hear him? 'We' may rest easy now. Much he's done to make things safe for little Eleanor. Wonder which he thinks he is, Lindbergh or his flying boat? 'We.' Police!"

"Don't waste any more breath on Dicky's shortcomings," I said, laughing. "I have something far more important to tell you."

She turned to me with a quick, keen look.

"I thought you were gone too long to bring back only the thin slice of bacon you did," she said shrewdly. "What else did Dame Ticer opine?"

Without omitting a single point, I related Mrs. Ticer's story of the mysterious owl hoots every third night, of Eleanor Lincoln's patent fright, and of the girl's going out into the night at each call of the owl.

"She is sure that the call comes from a human throat, and that the girl is menaced by some mysterious danger."

"She wouldn't have to be possessed of Sherlockian powers to deduce that," Lillian said dryly. "What else did she spill?"

"Nothing except to wish that you and I could devise some way to help Miss Lincoln."

"Just like that," Lillian commented with a derisive snap of her fingers. "We can't do a thing as long as the girl doesn't give us her confidence."

She shot a furtive little look at me, and I answered it openly.

"I'm a bit remorseful over that angle of the affair," I said. "I'm going to put a candle or two in the window in the hope she'll understand the chimney seat is waiting for her."

"Do that little thing," Lillian urged. "It's the only thing possible just now. Drat the Dicky-bird. I wish I knew what's running around in his noodle. I believe he's got the key to this whole thing planted away. Only I think, man-like, he probably underestimates the danger to the girl. In the meantime, all I've got to go on is a beautiful assortment of theories that I can't prove. Oh, boy! but I'm glad that beach picnic is tomorrow. I'll be glad of it for its own sake—I love getting down to the ocean—but above all I want the chance I've been waiting for, to watch dear old Phil in his various reactions. In some ways his part in this mess is the most puzzling of all."

MEDITATIONS of a MARRIED WOMAN

by HELEN ROWLAND

HOW MANY MEN HAVE "IT?"

SOMETIMES, I think that more men than women are endowed with "It"—probably because men are less self-conscious than women.

Most men appear to think that just being a MAN is an irresistible charm in itself—like being a blonde or a prize Angora or a brand new baby.

And that thought, alone, sustains their amour propre, makes them totally "unselfconscious," and free them of any inferiority complex.

HELEN ROWLAND

When it comes to doing the charming, most men leave all the heavy work to women. It never occurs to a man to wonder if he is being entertaining, if his new cravat is becoming, or if his nose is shiny. Unless he is a professional sheik, he never even stops to ask himself whether he has "It" or not. The whole question in his mind is whether or not the woman interests HIM. Once that is settled, it's all over but ordering the flowers and telling her the glad news.

* * *

Self-contentment is a wonderful thing! It's a pity that more women are not filled with that sublime self-complacency which is the basis of all savoir faire, and personal magnetism.

It is only when a man's self-confidence sours and turns into conceit that he becomes self-conscious and loses all his "It." For a little vanity makes a woman more confident—but it makes a man positively laughable!

* * *

What is masculine "It," anyway? What makes a man attractive to women?

No woman ever loves a man just because he is good or intelligent or handsome or successful—or even just because he is in love with her. She may MARRY him for some of these things—but not one of them would make her head whirl dizzily and her heart leap up into her throat at the sound of his motor-horn under her window.

* * *

"It," in a man, is manner, poise, responsiveness—the light of understanding in the eye, the instinctive knowledge of how to make love to a woman, without either yawning with listlessness or crushing out all her ideals with caveman tactics.

* * *

Many a plain, bald, middle-aged man has more "It" than a conceited young Adonis. Many a little shrimp, who understands women, has more charm for the girls than a six-foot Apollo, all brawn and protoplasm.

* * *

Most of the men in the public eye, who have "It" are full of self-confidence but devoid of conceit. Lindbergh and the Prince of Wales are probably the two shyest young men in the world today; but they can never be accused of lack of self-confidence.

* * *

But, almost any man can have "It," who has enough intelligence and no conceit!

Fay King Tells How Apparent Success Hides Secret Unhappiness

By FAY KING

I DO NOT blame young persons for sometimes doubting good advice.

It does look at times as if those who defy all the fine standards of life succeed beyond the rest of us.

But life is long, and they often pay for their ill-gotten gains with secret sorrows they hide from the world.

They pay penalties that are greater than would be loss of their apparent prosperity.

Bad health.
A loved one they cannot save.
Evil habits and sinister enemies that threaten to rob them of their peace of mind.

Ambitions beyond those they have attained, which they cannot fulfill.

Remember that pose of carefree content is very necessary to those persons. They must often fool themselves as well as the world!

TOMORROW'S HOROSCOPE

Thursday, July 26

AN unpropitious astral condition may account for much contention and strife on this day. The tendency to turbulence and violence in all departments of being should be held in check if any progress is to be attained. New ventures and undertakings are under a baneful ray, carrying a menace of fraud and treachery, and generally the situation promises disturbance and disruption.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of disturbance and disruption unless they resolutely decide to check all incitements to turbulence and strife as well as rash acts. New projects are under a menacing ray, threatening fraud or deception. Make all changes cautiously.

A child born on this day may require most careful training to inculcate self-control and prudence in every direction, as it is predisposed to tumult and passion as well as self-indulgence.

By correlating things upon the earth to their correspondences in the sky knowledge may be gained in every department of life.—C. C. BAIN.

SKYWARD

Byrd's Letters After Polar Flight Contained Many Phases of Life

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Byrd Explains Hero Business

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Commander Byrd first trained for a seafaring profession, but later became interested in aviation. He has described the dangers of pioneer flying and the crash of the America. During the war he established an air unit at Halifax, N. S. He advocated the creation of a Bureau of Aeronautics in the Navy Department. Due to missing a train he failed to make the fatal test flight on the ZR-2. He described the adventurous flights of the first aviators to cross the Atlantic Ocean and of his trip to the North Pole.

CHAPTER XXIII.

ONCE in my Annapolis days I marched down the town street as color bearer. The band was playing. As I passed, men uncovered, ladies applauded, children waved their hands. I was stirred by this show of admiration. Pride filled me. I seemed walking on the air. I felt brave, superior, triumphant.

Then with a thump, came the truth. People weren't saluting and cheering me. They were saluting the Stars and Stripes which I carried.

Exactly that was happening now. The cheers and the handclaps, the waving of hats and flags, the music and the speeches weren't really meant for me any more now than that boyhood morning in Annapolis when I marched at the head of the procession holding aloft the flag of my country.

The banner I carried now wasn't so visible, nor easily painted. It didn't in its symbolism depict the stormy history of a people. It never would stir a nation to righteous indignation against an invader. It couldn't be nailed to the mast of a sinking ship.

No, my banner was none of these. In our success people saw success that might have been their own. In Bennett and me mothers saw their sons, wives their husbands, sisters their brothers. In us men saw what they, too, might have done had they had the chance. In us youth saw ambition realized.

Lecture Tour

In us America for the moment dramatized that superb world-conquering fire which is American spirit. For the moment we seemed to have caught up the banner of American progress. For the moment we appeared to typify to them the spirit of America.

It was great to think that, even for these precious moments, we were destined to carry the banner.

Now that my eyes were opened I began to look for more manifestations of this discovery of mine. I went to the Middle West to lecture. In a small town off the beaten track I stopped for a one-night stay. A leading citizen drove me about just before sunset.

"We are very proud of our parkways," he said. "They are built by personal contribution. Those who can't give money contribute their services. By the way, the engineer of our steam roller told me the other day he hoped I'd introduce him to you when you came here."

"Why not see him now?" I suggested. The thought of the people building their home town's boulevards by pure community spirit appealed to my imagination.

We drove to a frame bungalow near the edge of the town. Two urchins hung on the gates of an untidy yard. A tired-looking woman with a kindly smile met us at the door. Two more urchins clung to her skirt.

"Come right in. Jim's just back from the factory. He'll be out soon's he's changed his shirt."

Jim came in wiping his hands. He was tall and lean. His whole face lit up when his townsman introduced me.

"Commander Byrd speaks at 8," said my escort. "Don't forget." Jim nodded, his eyes fixed on my face. His wife must have felt the strain of the situation; her husband's sudden inarticulate silence.

Byrd Gives Advice

She made a few irrelevant remarks, then suddenly turned to him: "Jim, tell Commander Byrd bout your invention."

Jim flushed. He began to talk, haltingly at first, about a scheme for vertical flight, a sort of helicopter. He had a small workshop out in the woodshed. He was building a model of his device.

"You ought to get someone to back you," I told him. "If the idea is practicable the right sort of engineering assistance will put it through in no time."

"But that isn't it." Jim put up his hands as if to shape the thought he could not accurately convey in words.

His wife broke in with, "I told him that very thing."

Jim's fingers groped. He said:

"It isn't a question of money. It's somebody to look ahead and see what we're coming to." The words were tumbling out now. "All they think of is profits. One man turned me down because it wouldn't pay dividends this year.

"Another said he'd pay me a big lump sum if I'd give him what I'd worked out so far. They're both wrong.

"I want to move slowly. The Wrights did when they started. They could have sold out early to an amusement company. We would not have been flying today if they had."

The wife was angry now. "Don't go on like that," she said.

But Jim could not be stopped. I didn't want to stop him. He poured out his whole story, a life-time of struggle and hard work. Yet he could not sacrifice his idea for quick gain.

We had to break away before he finished. As we drove back my friend the leading citizen said: "I have known him for years. That is the first time he has ever loosened up. You see what it is, of course. He thinks you would do the same as he is doing if you were in his boots. I believe your visit helped him."

Mail Heavy

That gave me my second cue to appreciation of my discovery, and again I felt humble and grateful. Listening became one of the best things I did. What a paradox it was, too! I had always looked on the returned explorer as a sort of traveling oracle. True, people seemed to like my films of the flight and politely followed my yarn of how we reached the Pole and returned. There were speeches of introduction beforehand, and handshaking afterward. But these were routine. The interesting moments I looked forward to were where someone got me off in a corner and told his story.

These stories were superior to mine. Mine was hemmed in by realities like time and distance, whereas the others were usually bounded only by the elastic horizon of human imagination.

It would take a dozen thick volumes to record all my experiences that confirm that discovery I had made in Washington. My mail alone in the months since my return contains a thousand stories of human happiness, hope and heartbreak.

"Why don't you get a form letter thanking these people who write you?" suggested an efficient friend of mine.

Coincidence played into my hands. I handed him two letter I had just opened. "Read these and you will understand."

He read aloud:

Dear Captain Byrd: You never heard of me, and will probably never see me. I keep house for my two brothers. Our mother and father are dead. It may sound silly to tell you such things, but all last winter we have had a hard time. One of my brothers lost his job. The other had an abscess on his back and couldn't work for several months. Then we began reading about your plans and later about your fine trip to the North Pole. I have to work so much there is no chance to get about. We have lived your adventures with you. It has been fun and I want to thank you and wish you luck on your next flight.

Then he read the other letter which was typical of thousands I had received from boys and girls:

My Dear Commander: I like you. I like your trip to the North Pole. I have made a model of the Josephine Ford. Will you please put your name on a piece of paper so that I can paste it on my little airplane. I hope you get across the Atlantic all right. I know you will. I will be reading about you.

Hero Business

My friend tossed the letters back. "Sounds like testimonials for a patent medicine," he said skeptically.

"It might," said I, "if there were only two. But there are hundreds. Many talk like that when I meet them. The adventures have a real meaning to many people and to all the great youngsters."

"Well, you're a national hero, aren't you? Isn't that what does it?"

I looked him in the eye. "I'm really only carrying the banner for a little while," said I.

He looked at me as if I had suddenly lost my mind. "The what?"

A tumult in the street below our window put an end to our talk. We looked out. I knew what was happening.

In the sunshine flags twinkled. Black ribbons of humanity lined the avenue. At upper windows were crowding faces. Extra traffic men pranced to and fro. Long gay streamers of confetti floated down from the skyscrapers. A band flashed into view. The quick march it played was the music of victory. Uniformed ranks swung rhythmically behind the band. Then came a column of automobiles.

In the leading car, framed with flowers, stood a sturdy youthful figure, arms outstretched to the cheering multitude. It was Gertrude Ederle.

I leaned far out. I wanted to shout a message, to deliver something I had been holding.

I wanted to shout: "Here is the banner!" and cast that invisible something into the outstretched hands of the girl in the leading car.

But I did not need to. The busy throats of ten thousand Americans were shouting my message. And the banner was already in the hands of its next fortunate bearer.

That's what this hero business means.

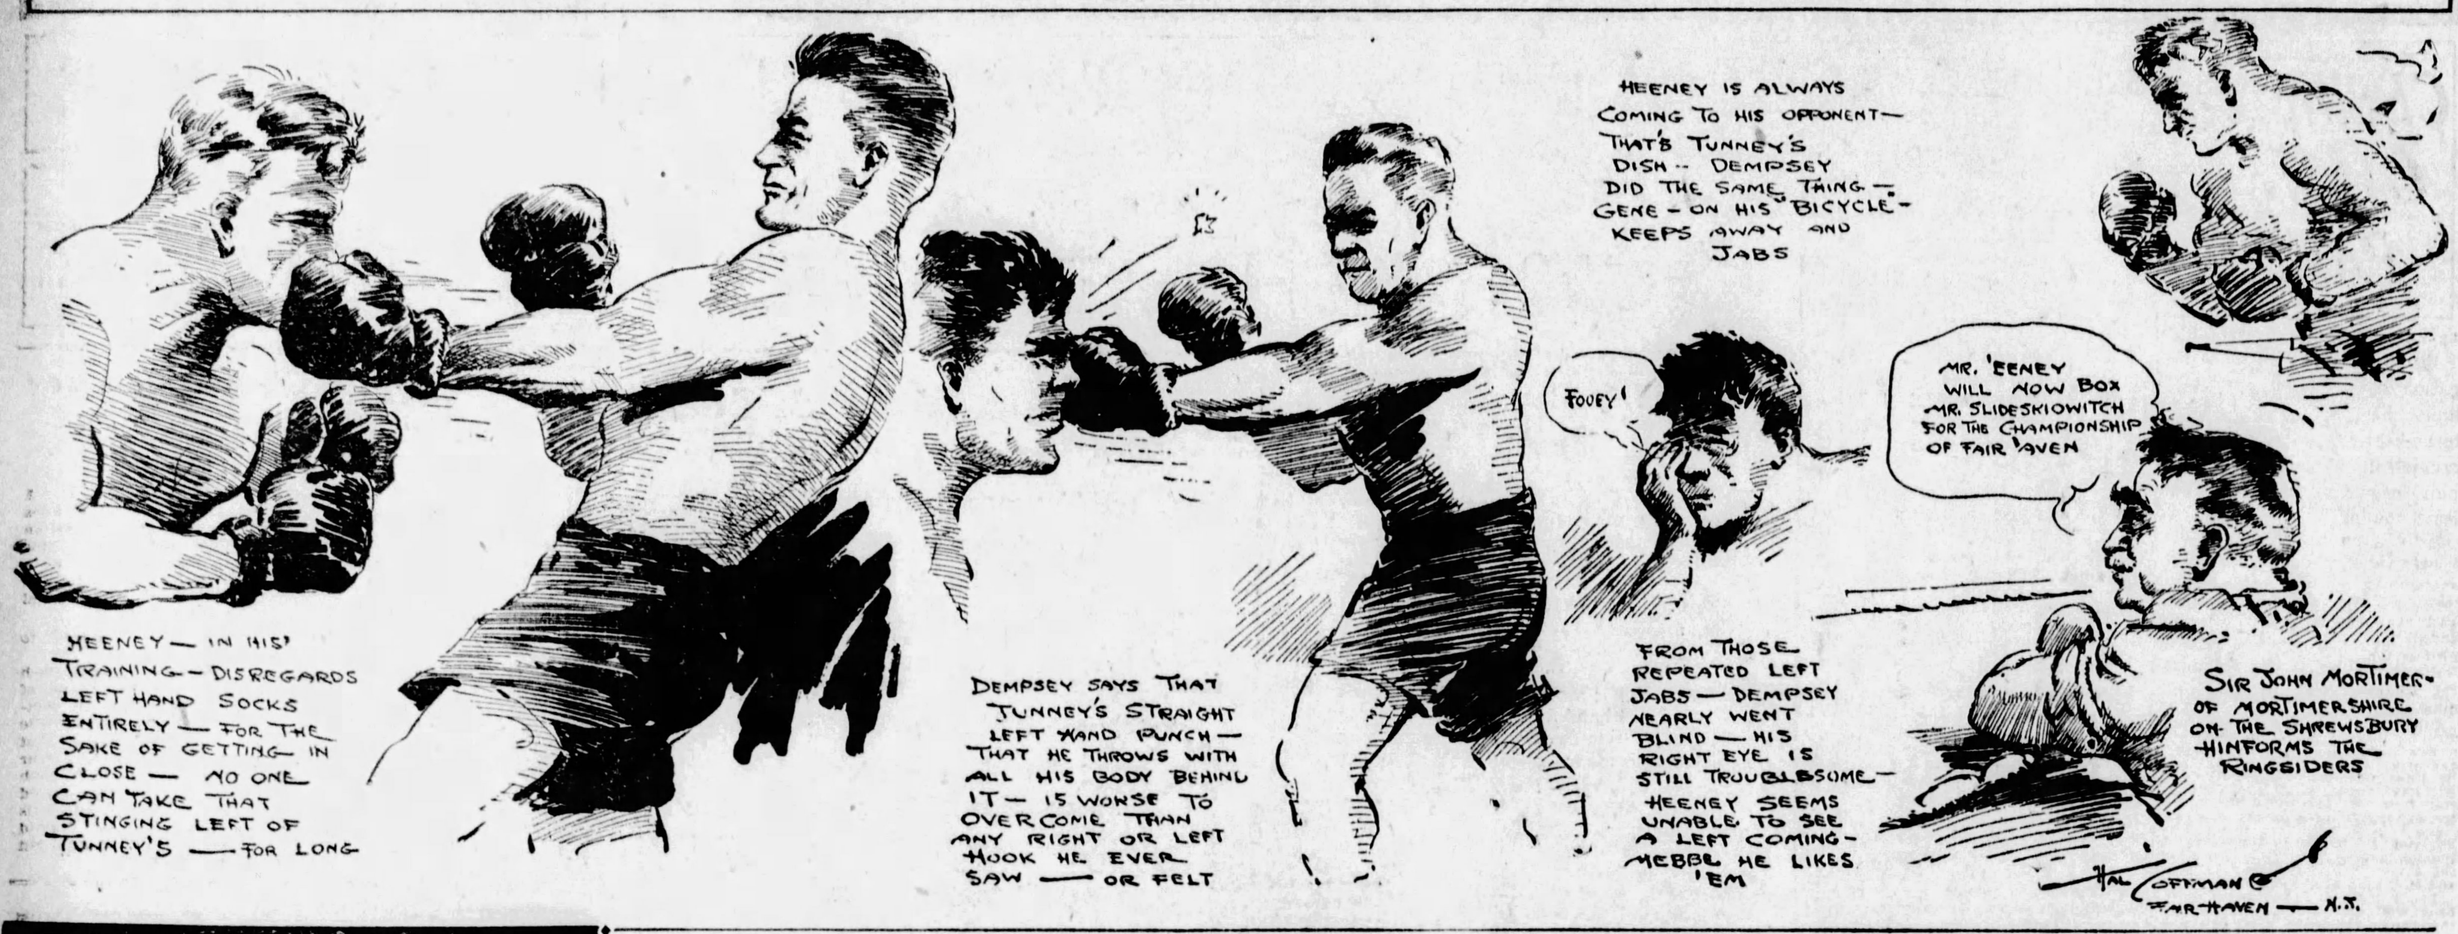
BUCS SEEK REVENGE OVER GIANT HOSTS TODAY

Some Last-Minute Pre-Fight Impressions Of This Tunney-Heeney Thing—By Hal Coffman



SPORT COMMENT
by JAMES J. LONG

World Quickly Forgets Fallen Fistic King and Lionizes Conqueror—Greb Held to Have Made Tunney Champion.

THAT the world loves a winner and is quick to turn its back on a loser who formerly was an idol, has been demonstrated frequently in the sport realm, particularly in the fight game.

Jim Jeffries.

One of the most pathetic sights in the history of the ring pastime followed the meeting of Jim Jeffries and Peter Jackson in San Francisco on March 22, 1898, less than three months before Jeffries won the world heavyweight championship from Bob Fitzsimmons.

JACKSON, one of the greatest fighters of all time, had won a great following in America, and was unbeaten prior to the Jeffries bout, but Jeffries defeated him in three rounds.

After the fight, while a great crowd of fans was following Jeffries, and singing his praises, a forlorn figure emerged from the arena and walked slowly down a side street, seemingly broken and friendless, and with no one accompanying him or offering him a word of consolation. It was Jackson. He was done. The fight world that formerly had cheered the great Negro battler turned from him to lionize a new champion.

IT has been the same on most occasions when the heavyweight championship changed hands, though John L. Sullivan retained his popularity to some extent after he fell.

Fickle fandom turned from Jim Corbett to Bob Fitzsimmons, and then from Fitzsimmons to Jeffries.

Jack Johnson was the big man in the public eye when he defeated Tommy Burns and Jeffries.

Jess Willard was hailed as a hero after he snatched the title from Johnson, and the tide of public favor turned to Jack Dempsey when he conquered the giant Willard.

SOME time after he lost the crown to Gene Tunney, Dempsey became more popular than he had been as champion, but it wasn't that way at the time of his fall. He was a far greater card than Gene Tunney when he entered the arena for their fight in Philadelphia in 1926, but after the fight everybody deserted him and proceeded to praise Gene. It wasn't much different after their Chicago fight in 1927, though the long-count accusation kept him from being entirely forgotten.

THAT'S the way of the world, and no one realizes it more fully than Tunney, the present champion, who will defend his title against Tom Heeney tomorrow night. He knows that when he falls, whether it be tomorrow night, or at a later date, fight followers will flock to the side of his conqueror.

Harry Greb

"Some night," he said, "I suppose I'll go the way of all champions. I'll pick myself up in defeat and wander alone to my dressing room. I often wonder who'll be there then to shake my hand, who of the men I thought were friends will crowd the dressing room of the victor. I know, too, that many a fellow I don't appreciate now will be there that night with tears in his eyes. Others won't know me. Sometimes I think I'll feel that I never made a single friend since I won the title."

THE remarkable ability of the late Harry Greb is still fresh in the memory of the fight-going public. One of his old admirers went so far yesterday as to express the opinion that if Pittsburgh's only world ring champion were alive and at his peak today he could be holding titles in three classes as a superior fighter to Mickey Walker, Tommy Loughran and Gene Tunney.

Pittsburghers are not the only ones in the glove sport who

HILL SET TO HURL FRAY

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Sun-Telegraph Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, July 25.—With Carmen Hill up the Pirates will try today to square things with those Giants, who yesterday messed up things for the Freebooters in the opening clash of the four-game series.

Hill has had three days of rest and should be able to render a good account of himself as he faces his former mates of the diamond. Joe Genewich is ready to work for the McGraw clan.

The Buccos yesterday passed up a chance to move into fifth place, but the opportunity is with them again. The Cardinals took the measure of the Dodgers in Flatbush, the Robins holding to their half-game lead as the Polo Grounders trimmed the Buccaneers, 6-3.

The Pirates scared the Giants and about 8,000 of their supporters in the ninth inning with two out. An admirable sprint by L. Waner with two out in the last round made it possible for the Buccos to effect a deadlock, provided Brother Paul could hit for the circuit. And Paul was not far off, as he pulled a hot one toward the close-up stands. Alas, the liner smeared by the little slugger was aimed at a longer part of the field where it was hauled in by Melvin Ott.

OTT HITS HOMER

The same kid Ott spilled the beans for the Pirates with one of those trick home runs. The youngster caught one of Joe Dawson's twisters quite fairly in the fifth with two New Yorkers on the runways and the ball collided with the facade of the balcony for a homer.

The Buccos actually outhit the Giants, but that doesn't mean a thing especially in a park where the lofts often go for home runs. Benton was able to record his sixteenth triumph of the season.

CAN IT BE THAT TOM CAN LEARN FROM JACK HOW TO BEAT GENE?

Jack Dempsey caused a furore when he visited Tom Heeney's camp to give him the double-o. They had a nice quiet chat and at the conclusion Dempsey said he thought Heeney had a better than even chance of winning. What words of wisdom did the former champion speak into the ears of the pretender to the throne? Having lost to Gene Tunney twice, can the old Manassa Mauler impart to some one else the secret of how to beat his Nemesis?

GENE, READY, HINTS AT K. O. VICTORY

By GENE TUNNEY,
Heavyweight Champion of the World.

SPECULATOR, N. Y., July 25.—Yesterday marked the close of the longest training period I ever put in for a fight, and the most arduous part of the bout is over. Since early in May, when daily road work began, the long drill has gone steadily on. Fortunately, I will enter the ring with Heeney without an injury. At Philadelphia I had a badly split lip, and, again, last year in Chicago I suffered a slight astigmatism of the right eye because a sparring partner jabbed it with his thumb just five days before the batttle.

I think I have demonstrated to critics that my ring condition and physical condition are right. I have reached the peak and am ready to bear the bell.

Though I am loath to predict the actual outcome of the fight with Heeney, it is the opinion of Lew Fink that my punches are now not only more powerful than ever before, but my hands are strong enough to withstand the power put into them.

It was a left hook that wore down Tommy Gibbons and a right that knocked him out. In view of this and my present superb condition, it is not unlikely that a knockout will end the Heeney contest.

Today there will be only the final job on the road and tomorrow morning I will step into Charley Bob's seaplane with Bill Winston at the stick for the two hours' flight to New York.

LAST MINUTE RUSH MAY SAVE RICKARD

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor of The Sun-Telegraph.

NEW YORK, July 25.—Small ads in the New York newspapers tell how the wind is blowing with regard to this, now, heavyweight championship bout between Gene Tunney, the champion, and Tom Heeney, the challenger, which is slated for the Yankee Stadium tomorrow night. They announce that tickets—all seats reserved—ranging in price from $5 to $40, tax included, are on sale at the Madison Square Garden box office, which opens at 9 a. m. and closes at 9 p. m.

From this it may be gathered that there is some truth in the long-prevalent reports that the battle will not be quite a sellout and that Promoter Tex Rickard still has a few carloads of pasteboards which he would like to sell at their face value to cash customers.

The real low down is that what well may be the financial flop of the century is far from that million-dollar stage about which its papa has been orating and that it may fall several hundred thousands of dollars below that mark. It seems that Tex has been whistling to keep up his courage, and his gameness in going through with the venture at this time is a thing to be admired. Likewise his fine poker face, which became famous many years ago in the Klondike country. Unless there is a grand last-minute rush on the ticket booths at the Stadium tomorrow, the financial statement of the show will be little more than a throbbing pain in the head for the greatest promoter boxing has produced.

The ticket speculators, who have

Champion Off for Philly

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

Pittsburgh's advance delegation to the national public links championship, which is to be held at the Cobb's Creek municipal links in Philadelphia, beginning Tuesday, will leave tonight.

Carl F. Kauffmann, defending National champion, and Dick Wessell, another star member of the local team, accompanied by Assistant District Attorney Roy T. Klunk and William Earl Super, assistant professional at Schenley Park and Kauffmann's advisor, will leave for the Quaker City early this evening.

Other members of the local team will be leaving sometime between now and Sunday. John Jay Burke, executive committeeman of the public links section, U. S. G. A., who will have charge of all public linksmen from this section of the country, expects to leave Saturday night.

Lieut. Samuel Graham, Bernie McFarland, M. H. Boshert and C. J. Lunden are the other members of the squad, with S. Walter Phillips and M. Galido as alternates.

The expenses of the team have been well provided for, thanks to the funds received from the all-star exhibition matches and the selling of tags by Miss E. Lucille Bejach. About $436 was collected.

BOXING NOTES

JACK M'FARLAND of Wilkinsburg, boxes Lou Janetti and and Louis Columbo of Charleroi meets Bobby Grant in 10-rounds at Marietta, O., tonight.

Sammy Baker and Andy DiVodi meet in the main bout at Ebbets Field Brooklyn tonight. Andre Routis will box Vic Burrone and Nando Tassi will meet James J. Braddock on the same card.

Blitman is receiving a $25,000 guarantee for his end, while Bass is fighting on a straight percentage basis. Only Jack Dempsey, Gene Tunney and Mickey Walker ever have received a guarantee of $25,000 or more for bouts in Pennsylvania.

MAY WIN BY K. O. BOAST OF TOM

FAIRHAVEN, N. J., July 25.—(AP.)—Tom Heeney wound up training for his battle with Gene Tunney, heavyweight champion, tomorrow night, expressing supreme confidence of winning.

"I was never so confident of winning a fight as my championship shot against Tunney," he said. "If I am beaten I have no alibis to offer. I am in marvelous condition. You cannot make that too strong. I had never seen Tunney except to shake hands with him at Tex Rickard's dinner, but I have studied his style in motion pictures. My fights against Jack Delaney and Phil Scott have put me wise against Tunney's way of boxing."

After taking his last sock at the punching bag, Heeney stole away to remain in privacy until tomorrow morning when he packs his bag and starts for New York to weigh in at Madison Square Garden. His only companion today is Jimmy Hennessey, his trainer.

Paddock Under Fire From British

AMSTERDAM, July 25.—A new effort to disqualify Charles Paddock, veteran American sprint star, was made by the British delegation today at a meeting of the executive committee of the international Olympic committee.

The effort was believed to have failed.

Gen. Kentish, the British delegate, at a secret meeting of the committee last night, quoted a London newspaper article in which it was charged that Paddock had boasted four Americans in the 100-yard dash at Paris games, in 1924, agreed to make successive false starts in order to tire out Harold Abrahams, the British star, but finally did not do so.

still pay tribute to Greb. Jack Kieran, New York critic, takes exception to a statement made by another boxing man that it was Manager Billy Gibson who made Tunney a champion, and also differs with Tunney in the belief that he made himself champion.

"IT IS my settled opinion," Kieran says, "that the man who made Tunney the world heavyweight champion was the justly famed 'Pittsburgh Windmill,' the late Harry Greb. There was a fighter! Strange to say, he didn't pack a knockout punch, but he carried a world of color across the pugilistic horizon. In his first bout with Greb, Tunney was literally cut to pieces and battered all around the ring. The next morning Gene was down at the office of the Boxing Commission filing a request for a return bout. He fought Harry Greb five times, and it's safe to say that no reasonably intelligent boxer could meet Harry Greb that often without getting a liberal education in the art of fisticuffs. Incidentally, it was Harry Greb who first told the bystanders that young Gene Tunney was headed for the top.

Fight May Lose Money

been so active in connection with other big bouts, have laid off this one almost entirely. They have been "burned" several times by Rickard, who unloaded oodles of tickets on them and then circulated stories to the effect that spurious pasteboards were in circulation and advising all and sundry to buy only at the box offices if they wished to be sure they were getting the genuine pre-war label stuff. Now the "specs," who can smell a dud a mile away and have satisfied themselves that a Tunney vs. Heeney fight is anything but a "natural," are getting even—and it is astonishing how thoroughly the general public, which as a rule likes to take it on the chin as heavily as possible, is making it unanimous.

Tunney is supposed to be gettting a guarantee of $525,000 for his end and Heeney about $100,000. The Stadium costs about 10 per cent for rental, and Rickard is carrying the 25 per cent government tax on all tickets from $5 up. He plans to appeal this tax on the ground that it is class legislation and does not want to have to make refunds separately to all of his customers if he wins the case, as he expects to. Thus, if he takes in a million dollars at the gate, his actual receipts will be only three-quarters of a million. In addition to his guarantees and rental he has an enormous overhead of incidentals, and it is difficult to ascertain how he hopes to get off the well-known "nut." And, at that, if he does get his million-dollar gate, his arena will be only about half filled, which will make it an artistic failure, if not a financial one. So, I repeat, he is a game guy for going through with this thing and tempting fate.

LACK OF EXCITEMENT

New York may steam up for the fight tomorrow with the expected influx of fans from other cities, but, at this writing, about 36 hours before ringtime the old town isn't anything like it has been just before other big skirmishes—the Dempsey fights particularly. There are no heated public discussions of the merits of the fighters, and the attitude generally is one of "who cares?" The answer is that Tunney, as a champion, has not been able to cultivate a partisan public, and this is one spot where they've seen Heeney in his build-up fights and know his limitations.

One hears of little betting. Some Heeney money is reported around, but prohibitive odds are asked. The Tunney people want to get down at 2 to 1 and the best they are offered is 1 to 3 and 1 to 4. Few want to risk such heavy odds even on what appears to be a sure thing. It is likely that considerable of the final wagering will be on a basis of whether or not Tunney will win by a knockout.

The hotels report fairly large reservations for over the fight date, an indication that a goodly portion of the crowd will be made up of out-of-town fans—the old gang that attends all championship matches, regardless of where they are held.

TEX A GAME GUY

The color of these heavyweight championship fights used to attract the mobs. If this one has any color to get excited about it is hidden behind the color of the contestants, and nearly everybody is agreed that they lack that quality in copious quantities. In many years of covering big fights, I have not yet come across a situation quite like this one and the more I see of it the more I admire the usually cold-blooded business man, Rickard, for his sportsmanship in sticking to the ship and I hope he pulls it through without loss to himself. But I have my doubts—yes, and serious ones, that he will succeed.

CUDDY DEMARCO SIGNS FOR TWO BIG FIGHTS

Cuddy DeMarco, local junior welterweight, has signed for two 10-round bouts for next month. On August 2 DeMarco will meet Larry Brignolia, of Erie, in the main bout at McKeesport, while on August 6 he will meet Tony Vaccarelli, of New York, in the headliner of a show to be staged in Englewood, N. J.

TRIBE GETS STAR

CLEVELAND, July 25. — (AP.)—Outfielder Charley Dorman has been purchased by the Cleveland Americans from the Tyler club in the West Texas League, according to word from Bill Slapnicka, scout for the Indians, to General Manager Bill Evans here.

SPEAKING of SPORTS

by HARRY KECK
SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS EDITOR

NEW YORK, July 25.—The identity of the referee in any boxing bout under commission rule is supposed to be shrouded in doubt until the principals step into the ring, and this applies especially where there is such an important commercial prize as a championship at stake, but it seems to be generally accepted that Lou Magnolia will be the third man in the ring when Gene Tunney squares off against Tom Heeney at the Yankee Stadium here tomorrow night. Magnolia is the best referee in these parts and a great showman. Also, he is popular with the fans, who have a chant all their own, which goes: "We want Mag-nol-ia!"

The wisenheimers are whispering a secret along Broadway. Shh! Don't tell anybody we told you and we'll let you in on it. It is that Heeney's real age is 36 instead of 29. They point to his deeply wrinkled brow and battered phiz to prove their point, and who can say them nay?

HEENEY'S first fight in the United States was fought in February of last year, against a Negro fighter from Chicago by the name of Charley Anderson. Since then he has lost to Paulino, beaten Jack DeMave, won on a foul over Bud Gorman in three rounds, drew with Paulino, knocked out Jim Maloney in the first round, beaten Johnny Risko, drawn with Jack Sharkey and won over Jack Delaney.

In one day less than 17 months after his American debut he will be fighting Tunney for the championship. His entire career embraces only 33 fights, of which he has won 10 by knockouts, 17 on decisions, lost two (one on a foul), and drawn four. When Tunney startled the world by taking the title from Jack Dempsey at Philadelphia 22 months ago, Heeney was absolutely unknown as a contender in the heavyweight ranks. His rise has been one of the most phenomenal in history among the big fellows.

Jersey Jones, flatic scribe, manager, publicist, et cetera, credits little Toughey Murray of Ambridge, never more than a featherweight, with having been the first man to trade punches with the then unknown Tunney in the service. Both were in the Marines' station at Paris Island, just 10 years ago, and they put on the gloves. Toughey was all that his name implied and didn't care a hang about the size of the fellows he belted around in the camp, but Tunney's long stiff left and straight right cross were too much for him and at the end of the workout he predicted that Gene would get somewhere in this fighting racket.

ACCORDING to plans at this writing, Tunney will fly down from Speculator tomorrow morning, while Heeney will motor over from his New Jersey camp. They are due to weigh in at Madison Square Garden at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and then will be kept in seclusion until time to enter the ring. The main bout will get under way at 10 o'clock, Eastern daylight saving time, which conforms with Pittsburgh time. In the event of rain, it will go over to Friday night, and if it rains again then until Saturday night, by consent of the boxing commission.

VIC MORAN ENTERS LOCAL CYCLE EVENT

Vic Moran of Battle Creek, Mich., one of the fastest of the half-milers riding the board speedways, has signed and his entry blank for the motorcycle races to be held on the Bridgeville speedway Saturday.

A rider of several years' experience in fast company, Moran is expected to show well up toward the head of the list in the coming event.

The time trials, used to eliminate the slower machines and also to assign riding positions, will be run starting at 2 p. m., Daylight Saving Time, on Saturday. This will clear the way for the first event, which is scheduled for 3 p. m.

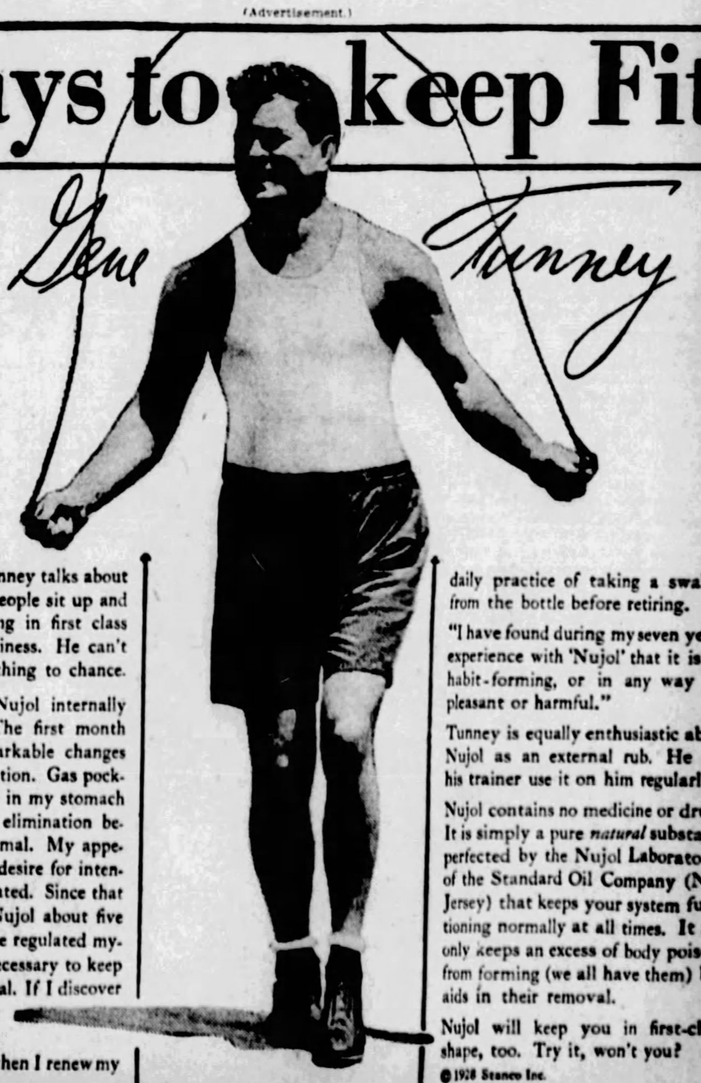
Ways to keep Fit

By Gene Tunney



WHEN Gene Tunney talks about keeping fit, people sit up and take notice. Keeping in first class condition is his business. He can't afford to leave anything to chance.

"I started taking Nujol internally seven years ago. The first month Nujol brought remarkable changes in my physical condition. Gas pockets no longer formed in my stomach and intestines. My elimination became active and normal. My appetite increased and a desire for intensive trainingwas created. Since that time I have taken Nujol about five nights a week. I have regulated myself to the amount necessary to keep my elimination normal. If I discover that I have taken an excess I stop its use for a couple of days, when I renew my daily practice of taking a swallow from the bottle before retiring.

"I have found during my seven years' experience with 'Nujol' that it is not habit-forming, or in any way unpleasant or harmful."

Tunney is equally enthusiastic about Nujol as an external rub. He has his trainer use it on him regularly.

Nujol contains no medicine or drugs. It is simply a pure natural substance perfected by the Nujol Laboratories of the Standard Oil Company (New Jersey) that keeps your system functioning normally at all times. It not only keeps an excess of body poisons from forming (we all have them) but aids in their removal.

Nujol will keep you in first-class shape, too. Try it, won't you?

Enormous 'Bootleg' Loans A New Wall Street Menace.

—By B. C. FORBES—

"BOOTLEG" loans are being made in Wall street. They have reached a total of about $1,500,000,000. They are alarming the authorities who, thus far, have been even less successful in controlling them than the revenue and police authorities have been in stopping the sale of bootleg liquor.

This new development in the monetary center of the country is full of dynamite. Some day the stock market may be rocked.

YESTERDAY'S column explained why call money rates have fluctuated so suddenly from normal to abnormal rates, jumping to 10 per cent one day, then back to 5 per cent, up again to 8 per cent, then down again. Francis H. Sisson, able vice president of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, who was quoted at length yesterday, adds this comment on the probability of further wide fluctuations in call money and gives a lucid explanation of the origin and handling of the so-called "bootleg" loans:

"With the large total of loans on securities, both through brokerage channels and by banks directly to their customers, and with member banks borrowing around $1,000,000,000 from the Federal Reserve, the undertone of money is very firm.

"While this condition prevails it seems probable that the call market will be extremely sensitive and subject to wide swings from day to day.

"AN important factor in the present situation is that, by reason of the large accumulation of money reserves in the hands of corporations and individuals, the control of credit has to some extent passed from banks. In the present call money market there is probably $1,500,000,000 loaned on call by corporations and individuals out of their own funds, in which the banks act simply as agents for them in placing the loans, and this money is not subject to banking regulation in any manner.

"This is one of the by-products of prosperity with which we have not learned to deal.

"IN view of the increasing volume of this business, banks in the New York clearing house found it necessary to impose a charge of five per cent upon the interest return to the loaners as a fee for the large amount of work these loans imposed upon them. It is now realized that this charge is not sufficient to compensate the banks for the work and the risks they entail.

"The banks further suffer from this situation in that these funds are withdrawn from their deposit accounts, where they could be used profitably and directly to meet the needs of the business situation, but the lure of six or eight or even 10 per cent return over the normal deposit rate of two per cent, with the small handling charge imposed by the banks, has been too great to be resisted, and this great factor of uncontrolled accumulated money has been the most important element in the recent money situation.

"IF in the regular course of events these funds are called as the normal fall demand for use in business increases, they are likely to be withdrawn in large amounts and without warning, presenting another unsettling factor in market conditions.

"UNTIL this force is brought under control in some manner, violent and apparently unreasonable fluctuations in the money market are always possible. The banks cannot, of course, be properly charged with responsibility in such a situation, unless they are in control of all the elements which compose it.

"There is a growing sentiment that some plan of control must be devised to meet the problems presented and it is understood that the clearing house committee is being urged to take steps to that end."

TO the outsider the problem looks far from impossible to solve. In the first place, the federal government and the Federal Reserve authorities have practically unlimited power over members of the reserve system. Also, the New York Stock Exchange governors never hesitate to lay down the law to their members. The New York Clearing House, with which the banks are affiliated, also can exert powerful influence.

Let all these various authorities get together if need be, and the menace which has arisen—and it is a menace—can unquestionably be brought under rigid control. Remedial action is urgent.

Can you begin to imagine what would happen if one-half, or one-third, or one-fourth of these uncontrolled call loans were to be withdrawn suddenly? We would, I fear, experience an old-fashioned money panic. That we want to avoid

SUGAR MARKET.

NEW YORK, July 25.—The raw sugar market was unchanged today and while no sales were reported, there were offerings at last paid prices of 4.21c for Cuban duty paid, while some nearby duty frees were available at 1-32c less, or 4.18c, with buyers showing no interest.

Increased offerings in the spot market and the easier London market, accompanied by reports of more favorable weather in Europe led to increased selling pressure in raw sugar futures and caused an easier ruling of prices. The market opened at 1 point advance on September due to covering, but 2 to 3 points lower on other positions. Subsequently the whole list weakened under liquidation and commission house selling with prices at midday 2 to 6 points net lower.

In refined a better new business was reported, but it was chiefly of a hand to mouth character. Prices were unchanged at 5.75 to 5.80c for fine granulated.

MARKET STRONG WITH BUYING SELECTIVE

NEW YORK, July 25.—(AP.)—The stock market had the appearance of strength again today, but the buying continued to be of a highly selective character. Resumption of pool activities in the specialties lifted more than three score issues from 1 to 5 points above yesterday's final quotations, with half a dozen mounting to new high ground.

Trading continued relatively light in character, due to the absence of any widespread public participation. Call money was in plentiful supply at the renewal rate of 5½ per cent and that figure was shaded in the "outside market," but time money and commercial paper rates continued firm. In banking circles the ease of call money was generally regarded as temporary in character.

Railroad shares received better support on the publication of a weekly car loadings statement, making a favorable comparison with the corresponding period a year ago. Grangers led the advance, with the buying in that group, stimulated by expectations of heavy crop movements this fall.

Gains of 3 to 5 points were recorded by several of the high priced industrials including Radio, Wright, American Machine and Foundry, U. S. Cast Iron Pipe, General Motors, Midland Steel Products preferred, Coty and American Radiator. Warner Brothers Pictures, which has recorded a spectacular gain in the last fortnight, lost ground on profit-taking.

ROUNDTABLE of BUSINESS

Steel Company's Reports Exceed Expectations—Cut in Coal Cost to Help Further.

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

THE reports of steel companies operating in this district in the second quarter of the year are exceeding expectations. Advancing price levels and a fairly good rate of operations were primarily responsible.

THE Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, which is the largest independent producer of steel in this district and the second largest independent in the country, showed the greatest net income for the three months ended June 30 of any quarter since the one ended on September 30, 1926.

NET income was $4,241,091. After deducting preferred dividend requirements, $5.61 a share was earned on the 573,320 shares of common stock. This compared with only $3.28 a share in the first quarter of the year and $4.45 a share in the corresponding quarter of 1927.

THE smaller amount reported for the first quarter of this year was responsible for the fact that net for the first half of 1928 of $7,144,548, or $8.88 a share, was slightly less than in the first six months of 1927.

THE earnings for the six months were far from unsatisfactory, however, when it is realized that dividend requirements for the entire year on both the common and preferred stocks were earned by a margin of $150,840.

In other words, even if J. & L. should earn nothing for the remainder of this year, the directors would be able to continue paying dividends without dipping into the surplus of previous years.

JONES & LAUGHLIN STEEL CORPORATION has always been remarkably conservative in its dividend policy. This has enabled the company to steadily improve plant facilities without recourse to new financing. It is also making it possible to reduce the funded debt, which is exceptionally small for a steel producer of its size.

AT THE end of 1927, funded debt was only $12,982,000, compared with physical properties valued at $123,418,815 on the balance sheet.

There is reason to believe that the actual value of the properties is much greater. Liberal depreciation has been charged against them over a long period of years, and no adjustment has been made for the increase in the value of the real estate holdings.

THE strength of the financial position can be seen in the current assets of $70,732,806, against current liabilities of $9,706,027. Cash of $11,196,045 was greater than all the current liabilities and was nearly as great as the funded debt.

AT PRESENT the common stock is on a $5 annual dividend basis. In 1927, earnings were equivalent to $12.49 a share, and in 1926 they were $19.46 a share. In view of the remarkable financial structure of the company, it would not be surprising if a larger share of these earnings would be given to the stockholders at some time in the future.

ONE factor which probably added to the net income in the quarter just ended, and which will be of greater influence in the future, is the reduction made in the cost of coal used. The company's three union mines have been changed to a nonunion basis. In addition, new properties have been opened in a nonunion district. Two tons of coal are used to make every ton of finished steel, so that even a small saving in coal costs bulks large in net income.

COAL was also responsible for some abnormal additions to costs last year. In anticipation of the strike, about 2,000,000 tons of coal were piled to insure the company against any possible interruption of its regular supply. It cost 25 cents a ton to pile this and an additional 25 cents to remove it when it was needed. The storage of this coal cost the company $1,000,000. It is very unlikely that such a charge will ever burden its operations again.

AT PRESENT the company has 10 of its 12 blast furnaces in operation. One of the two idle furnaces is the Soho stack, which is at an isolated location and which probably will never be used again except in an extreme emergency.

SYNOPSIS.—It seems that Sir Harry Doncaster had set his heart upon going to the New Year's ball. "I won't be answerable for the consequences!" said the blunt old doctor, striking his cane upon the floor. "You have a heal cold."

ELSIE'S FIRST TRIAL

FIVE years have elapsed since Elsie De Vaux wedded Sir Harry Doncaster. False prophets were they who shook their heads at her bridal and said she would rue the day when she wedded Sir Harry—that he was—"unsteady, impulsive and fickle."

She knew it was true that he had loved unhappily before she met him; but the bright vision that had bewildered him was far beyond the seas. Would she cross his path again?

Merely Margy, An Awfully Sweet Girl

Story by Lloyd Mayer

By John Held, Jr.

"My dear, I'm all-of-a-PURL-and-GURGle, no less—I mean I've been having light hysTERics because you've never heard ANYthing so simply SCREAMing as this converSAtion I had on the BEACH with this odd soul PHWHEN, my dear, because, you see, I ASKED him what he thought about ARab going round and telling all these GIRLS he'd never been KISSED, and he was too asTOUNDed, my dear, and could hardly b'LIEVE anybody could be such a cheerful LIar, but it was SIMply KILLing because when I asked this PHWHEN benny whether HE'd make such a perverted statement as that, my dear, he got TERribly SErious and said he was NEVer the sort to KISS and TELL, but he HAD been KISSED—can you BEAR it, my dear? I mean I bet any girl who ever KISSED him wasn't the sort to kiss and tell EITHer, my dear, because I mean I think it would be SOMEthing you wouldn't care to TALK about AFterwards, do you know what I mean? But ACtually, my dear, the conCEIT of these poisonous SNUGgle-puppies like Phwhen and ARab is POSitively rePELlent, my dear, because I mean the way they talk GLIBly about girls NECKing them, as if it were something they good-NAturedly sort of perMITted, simply SLAYS me, my dear, because I mean I HONestly think soCIety or something must be on the VERGE of coLLAPSE when the WOMen have to take the inITiative or something and kiss the MEN—I mean I ACtually DO!"

Recognize China Now And Make Friends of 400,000,000 People

American recognition of the Chinese government should not wait on China's concessions to the selfish interests of imperialistic European nations.

The main purpose of the Chinese revolutions was to secure an independent China and to free China from foreign domination and from unjust and unjustifiable acquisitions by foreign nations of territory and privileges within the domain of China.

We cannot expect China to give up the chief object of her long struggle for independence merely to secure American recognition; and it is a surprising thing that the United States should ask China to sacrifice the fruits of her successful struggle.

It is as if France had asked us at the time of our Revolution to give up the essentials of the independence we had won from Great Britain before France would recognize us.

If France had taken that unwise attitude our American boys would certainly not have appeared on the battlefields in the late war shouting, "Lafayette, we are here!"

China is a powerful nation. Her people are strong, competent, reliable. They are the friends of our country and our people.

There may be a time when complications with Japan and all the other envious nations which hate us may make China's friendship valuable.

We are a self reliant people, but the time may come when we would be pleased, if only for the satisfaction of it, to hear four hundred million Chinese voices singing, "Uncle Sam, we are here!"

We have needlessly, uselessly, stupidly, offended our former sincere friend, Russia.

Let us not offend China, the other great power of Asia, needlessly.

Let us rather with a generous gesture make four hundred million friends.

Give China her recognition quickly, sympathetically, heartily.

It is only one hundred and fifty years since we were winning our own independence.

We should not so soon forget the experiences and the sentiments of that inspiring period.

It is "the shot that was heard around the world" which is now echoing in China.

Let us not repudiate our own principles and purposes to our own discredit and disadvantage.

Furthermore, let us not scorch our own fingers by attempting to pull the chestnuts of European nations out of the fire.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

Miss Earhart's Visit Adds to Aviation Spirit

The visit of Miss Amelia Earhart to Pittsburgh was much more than a demonstration in honor of the first woman to make an airplane flight across the Atlantic. True, giving deserved recognition to this intrepid young woman was the routine of official and public welcome extended to her, but behind the huzzahs of the crowd for the heroine there is developed an addition to the spirit in behalf of aviation. Its importance and necessity become more firmly fixed in the public mind. So in doing honor to Miss Earhart we also served ourselves.

Much of our future is in the roadways of the air. It depends upon us to hasten or delay the day when we make them advantageous to our community.

Romantic Leisure Days Recalled by Boat Race

"Steamboat Days" are brought back with the race from Cincinnati to New Richmond between the Betsy Ann and the Chris Grene, as staunch vessels as those which traversed the river routes the entire length of the Ohio and Mississippi and gave a romantic tinge of adventure to travel in the period of crinoline and cavalier, gambler and gospeler, planter and merchant, all together in one of the most vivid pictures of American life. The gayety, the possible tragedy, as nervous fingers pressed pistol triggers after card games, and the atmosphere of the old river days, of course, are not associated with this contest, but the spirit of the same steamboat men who knew Mark Twain is evident.

The biggest and best thing about this race is that it lets us know that we still have rivers—the selfsame rivers—and boats to ride on them. It lets us know that something most of us have forgotten still is the means of livelihood of sturdy men and a means of transportation that is returning in favor and growing. It attracts attention to a beautiful mode of leisurely travel, and leisurely travel is the greatest of luxuries. We must have speed, of course, there's no denying that, but we do not have to have speed at all times and on every occasion. The contest itself is a confession to necessity of speed, but speed of the swiftest boat on the river is a slow and steady pace in comparison to the gait at which we have been going.

When we go to the doctor at any time past middle age the good man tells us we must slow up. We cannot always be at a tension and not suffer for it. Zip! and we're there, is all right when there is necessity, but the lazy way is the more prudent and the more enjoyable when there is no urgency.

Hail to the victor of the steamboat race! It brings to us the call of the river, the call of poetry and of romance and of real living for enjoyment.

AND SO IT GOES—

Garrett P. Serviss Says:

To the Moon—But When?

THAT man will eventually be able to cross the gulf of space separating the moon from the earth I have no doubt, provided that human invention shall continue to make progress as in the past. The elements of the problem are well enough known, and some of the means of solving it are already at hand. The recent experiments in Germany with a "rocket-auto" show that.

The first step will be to send something across, to prove that the way is really open and traversible. The rocket principle undoubtedly offers the best means yet known. It is odd that Jules Verne did not think of that when he contrived his imaginary giant cannon to shoot an imaginary giant projectile from the earth to the moon. But, in fact, he did not think if it, without seeing its possibilities. He had the principle in his hands when, as readers of his story will remember, he employed a cartridge exploded against the stalled projectile to start it moving again, and, by miscalculation, set it going back to the earth instead of onward to the moon.

The cartridge was exploded in empty space against the outside of the projectile. The energy of the explosion expanding in all directions drove the projectile from the closed orbit into which it had fallen back within the gravitational control of the earth, and so down it came with a grand splash into the Pacific Ocean, and the great adventure was over.

If Verne had only thought out all the consequences of the principle of action and reaction which a rocket so admirably exemplifies he would have seen that no stupendous "cannon" bore 900 feet in the earth, no impossible concentration of explosive energy to start the projectile, and no yet more impossible contrivance to enable human beings inside it to withstand the shock of starting off at a speed of seven miles per second were necessary as a foundation for his story. The far more plausible and logical scheme of a giant rocket would have furnished him the means of sending off his moon explorers in relative comfort and safety.

One of the chief difficulties to be overcome in the rocket scheme arises from the fact that, since the rocket must carry along with it all the material necessary for a series of successive explosions continued throughout its course, the load becomes impracticably large. The only remedy for this would seem to be the invention of an explosive possessing immense energy locked up in a small mass. One immediately thinks of the amazing energy imprisoned in atoms, but the utilization of that is still only a dream of science.

Many persons seem to be curiously unable to understand how a rocket could drive itself through vacuous space, where, as they put it, "there is nothing for the explosion to push against." But there is no need of anything to push against. The explosive energy expands in all directions from the explosive center. This is exemplified in the firing of a gun. The energy that drives the projectile is exactly counterbalanced by the energy that kicks the gun backward. If the gun is fired in a vacuum, the result is the same.

The cannon projectile starts with the maximum speed, which is gradually lost as it continues its flight against the resistance of the air, or that of gravity, if the direction is away from the center of the earth. On the other hand, the repeating rocket may start with a relatively low velocity and gain speed as it flies, in consequence of the addition of energy from the successive explosions. Therein lies its advantage.

It is like the acceleration produced by gravity in falling bodies. The body takes a second to acquire a velocity of 32 feet per second, and two seconds to acquire a velocity of 64 feet; but in a minute it will be moving at the rate of nearly 2,000 feet per second.

Making Friends Too Easily

SOME people of the West and the Middle West have the opinion that the people of the East are cold, unresponsive, and too much given to family connection in their choice of friends.

This may be true, but not to the extent that a worthy person will not be given a fair chance to prove that he is entitled to friendship.

An Easterner whose family for four generations has lived in the same place said:

"We of the East to a great extent have friends whose family connections we know; we are a bit careful in our selection of friends, but usually we can tell a real fellow when we see one."

The real old-time Easterner wants merely to be convinced that he is not making a mistake when he places confidence in a person.

And there is no fault to be found with his position.

If you make friends easily and take everyone at face value you know you have been deceived.

One who is careful in his own selection of friends should support the man who waits a while before bestowing friendship on an individual of whom he knows little.

The Rhyming Optimist
By ALINE MICHAELS

The Test

"TELL, me, I beg," cried the toiling one
To the sage who rested from labor done,
"How shall I know, when I shape this stone
Into the semblance of waves wind blown,
How shall I know if the world will see
The message I strive for, the majesty?"
Then the sage replied to the eager youth:
"Forget the world while you carve the truth!
For this is the test every work must pass,
And this is the goal all would gain at last,
Be your labors splendid, or poor and crude
By this light must the sum of your toil be viewed.
"Remember," the sage told the striving youth,
"The world must heed, if you carve the truth!"

Great Passages from the Bible

The Good Samaritan
(Luke 10; 25-37)

AND, behold, a certain lawyer stood up, and tempted him, saying, Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?

He said unto him, What is written in the law? how readest thou?

And he answering said, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all they heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbour as thyself.

And He said unto him, Thou hast answered right: this do, and thou shalt live.

But he, willing to justify himself, said unto Jesus, And who is my neighbour?

And Jesus answering said, A certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho, and fell among thieves, which stripped him of his raiment, and wounded him, and departed, leaving him half dead.

And by chance there came down a certain priest that way: and when he saw him, he passed by on the other side.

And likewise a Levite, when he was at the place, came and looked on him, and passed by on the other side.

But a certain Samaritan, as he journeyed, came where he was: and when he saw him, he had compassion on him.

And went to him, and bound up his wounds, pouring in oil and wine, and set him on his own beast, and brought him to an inn, and took care of him.

And on the morrow when he departed, he took out two pence, and gave them to the host, and said unto him, Take care of him; and whatsoever thou spendest more, when I come again, I will repay thee.

Which now of these three, thinkest thou, was neighbour unto him that fell among the thieves?

And he said, He that showed mercy on him. Then said Jesus unto him, Go, and do thou likewise.

Tales that are Told

Worst Story I Have Heard Today
By WILL ROGERS

THERE'S one more report come in from the Fourth of July. A guy was seriously injured in Aberdeen for telling this joke. He said his little Scotch cousin in America went to his dad and asked for some noise-makers for the Fourth. The old man said never mind, he would take care of him for snappy noise when the big day came around. So the kid waited, and on the morning of the Fourth the dad brought out a new bottle of glue.

"I paid a nickel for this," he says, "and you can put it on your thumb, a wee bit at a time, and snap your fingers loud all day."

Politeness Itself

LITTLE LEONARD had been told by his parents that whenever visitors called at the house it was his duty to pay them some attention.

Some few days later a Mrs. Daniel, who had been asked to tea, arrived, and Leonard was cautioned to behave himself.

Tea was just ready when the small boy sauntered into the room and remarked in his best drawing-room manner:

"How do you do, Mrs. Daniel? So pleased you've come. I've just been reading about your husband's amazing experience in the den of lions."

Wouldn't Bite

THE buttonless husband contemplated his jacket which he couldn't do up. It occurred to him that he might get something done by a little appropriate sarcasm.

So, as he was just about to go shopping with his wife, he remarked:

"Oh, by the way, remind me to get some needles and thread when we're out, dear!"

His wife gave him a dazzling smile.

"You silly, extravagant boy," she cooed, "you can always borrow mine, you know!"

New York Day by Day
by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, July 25.—The business of being a master of ceremony at cabarets, night clubs, theaters and movies has become one of the highest paid jobs in the world of entertainment. Salaries in instances surpass those of stars in the legitimate theater.

Balieff started it with his Chauve Souris, slipping in and out and exploding conversation like a bottle of pop. The first American master of ceremony was the blond fetlocked Raymond Hitchcock, who took tickets at his own show and wandered up and down the aisle shaking hands with customers.

The notion added a touch of intimacy the theater had never known. Performers heretofore were to be looked at and heard, but familiarity was taboo. Night clubs and cabarets seized the idea and enlarged it. They picked out celebrities as well as "butter and egg men," and flattered them.

The success of Texas Guinan was in her capitalization of the trick. She attracted a heavy spending ringside patronage among those who went there solely to be targets for her sophisticated sallies. They purred to being hailed with: "Hello, Sucker!"

Today in New York there are probably a dozen masters of ceremony whose weekly pay checks are from $1,000 to $5,000. A glorified cinema temple brought the highly exploited Paul Ash from Chicago to Broadway at $3,500 a week for a long engagement. He was little known outside of the Windy City.

Among the most adroit and highly paid Balieffs are Ben Bernie, Frank Fay, Ed Wynn, Julius Tannen, Dr. Rockwell, Phil Baker and no benefit is quite complete without Al Jolson or Eddie Cantor to introduce the acts and josh the customers.

In New York—as this is written and according to a theatrical agency—there are 183 masters of ceremony functioning. These include those in Bowery burlesque halls, coffee houses of the East Side, the Broadway cabarets, night clubs and glorified musical revues.

The master of ceremony racket is a sop to almost every New Yorker's ache to be noticed. Most of us are lonesomer than we care to admit, and when someone calls us by name before a big crowd of folk, we have a feeling we are quite a fellow about town, no matter how hyper-thyroidic we may be. And this attitude is not particularly confined to Manhattan.

Having been twitted from the rostrum at verious times by Ben Bernie, Roger Wolfe Kahn, Eddie Cantor, George White, Texas Guinan, Paul Whiteman, Will Rogers, Al Jolson, Ed Wynn, Julius Tannen, Raymond Hitchcock and Leon Errol, I'm just sappy enough to have received a faint glow out of each incident. And the fellow who says he is not similarly affected I suspect of fibbing.

About the only section of New York acquiring a Sunday manner is Wall street and surrounding neighborhood. The Sabbatical hush is pronounced. Majestic buildings have a silent grandeur—an efficacy of solemnity a bit saddening. There are people walking slowly among the graves of Trinity and St. Paul's. Pigeons coo and flutter in the canyons and the daily hurrah of the financial world seems far away.

Several Broadway movie mosques are passing out free copies of morning papers to patrons of their late performances. That helps them to forget.

The latest in doodads are cameras in colors matching the lady's costume. They resemble an ordinary vanity case, and those who carry them are able to snap their friends without looking like a kodaking tourist.

One of those Russian performers who will snap into a sitting down dance at the first wheeze of an accordion got his boot caught in a lady's chair in a cabaret the other night and the lady sat kerplunk on the floor. Her escort took a hand in the footwork, and the gentleman will have to stand up for several days, even to eat.

The Hounds of God
By DR. FRANK CRANE.

There was one great mind of the nineteenth century that knew how to read his Bible. Abraham Lincoln had Moses and Pharaoh in his mind when he wrote his second inaugural address, the noblest state paper of America:

"Fondly do we hope and fervently do we pray that this scourge of war may speedily pass away. Yet if God will that it continue until all the wealth piled up by the bondman's 250 years of unrequited toil shall be sunk, and until every drop of blood drawn with the lash shall be paid by another drawn with the sword, as was said 3,000 years ago, so still it must be said, 'The judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether.'"

Lincoln was of the Moses type; he did not laugh at the strange story of the plagues, he shuddered; he was finding out what it meant; he knew about "The Hounds of God:"

The hounds of God across the years
Are running swift and true;
Far and away they seem to play,
But they're tracking me and you.

The king is seated on his throne,
His courtiers stand around him;
They see him start and grasp his heart—
The hounds of God have found him.

At low midnight the wastrel wakes,
Afraid upon his bed;
The far-off sounds of the baying hounds
Are ringing in his head.

The wicked woman wipes her lips,
And says, "'Tis naught, 'tis naught!"
But the velvet feet of the hounds so fleet
Whisper behind her thought.

They have torn great empires limb from limb,
They have conquered the conquerers,
And their teeth have hurt for sins of dirt
In plagues that are worse than wars.

They have cruelly taken the old man down:
They have bitten the babe at the breast;
For there's never a sin of kith or kin
Can escape their fateful quest.

Before us goes God's angel tall,
Flying upon the wind;
And sweet as dawn he beckons us on—
But the hounds of God are behind!

OH, THESE WOMEN!
By LEOLA ALLARD

A PRETTY young woman, the mother of five children, and she wasn't 27 yet, came to me two years ago and asked me to help her find someone who would adopt two of her babies. They were twins, a boy and a girl, nine months old.

She had three others, all small, and she thought fate had piled trouble on a little thick in sending twins. She had to work to help pay the bills, and when she came home at night there were five babies crying for food and care. Her mother was helping her temporarily.

You couldn't give your children away. You wonder about this girl, and what she is made of.

Well, her big blue eyes filled with tears when she told me about them, and the night she actually delivered the twins into my hands to be sent a half hour later, into a beautiful home, and adopted into a fine family. I think the girl's heart hurt terribly.

An attempt to argue her out of her decision failed utterly. Her mother was feeding the boy to win a concoction that didn't agree with him, and she couldn't talk her out of it. Every day the child got sicker.

I consulted a baby specialist, and explained the case. He said if the babies were to be taken, I should act at once as the boy would not survive that food.

The new parents, with a graduate nurse to attend the little boy came to the newspaper office in a big car with a liveried chauffeur, and with new pink and blue blankets to wrap the little ones in, and they took them away.

The investigation had taken some time, and the new parents were what any child might have been proud to pick for himself. The babies have a $100,000 trust fund from which they are to be educated and insured against the poverty their mother dreaded. The new father thought that was his duty.

The new mother, who had been a slim little thing, and who had longed for children for the 12 years of her married life, gained 20 pounds with the worry and care of her new family. It was exactly what she needed. Something besides herself to think about. And they certainly kept her busy.

The little boy is now in perfect health.

After their return from Europe, where they had spent a year, the new mother announced to her friends at home that those were HER TWINS. All sorts of baby parties followed. The children probably never will know that they were adopted.

It sounds hard and cold. But if that little mother had kept those babies, which were two more than enough, the little boy no doubt would have died. He had to have the best care for many months. They would have been deprived of an education unless they fought hard for it. When they are grown, never having known poverty, the children might find out they were adopted, and feel, sentimentally, that they have been cheated. But if they find out late enough, after they know a little about the hard knocks this world can administer to a very large and very poor family, I wonder how they will feel? Every precaution will be taken to keep them from finding out.
